Editorial

By Maggie Thompson

A couple of people have commented recently that they've found in the collecting world that some of their friends are seldom seen but always pick up their relationship from the last time of contact without a break.

Don and I first noticed this, I think, with George Scithers, a retired Army officer in the unique position of having been the editor of the oldest science-fiction magazine (Amazing Stories) and the most famous fantasy magazine (Weird Tales); he was also the first editor of Isaac Asimov's Science Fiction Magazine and the head of Owlswick Press. He's also articulate, funny, the focal point for decades for collectors of the work of Robert E. Howard — Do I digress?

At any rate, it was George who, after an interim of at least a year, came up and began a conversation with the sentence that followed logically from the conversation begun months before.

And that's the way life is lived in our world of occasional convention meetings and long-distance correspondence. And it's a delightful facet of our world.

Sometimes people will stop by the CBG booth to say something along the lines of, "Remember you were looking for information on X? Here's a photocopy of an article about it I just brought along, in case you were here." Sometimes people will — as I said — simply continue the conversation begun a year before.

It's fun, even when I don't remember the earlier discussion (in which case, people have been uniformly understanding, thank goodness). Which, for some reason, brings to mind the moment some years ago when a Major Name at the industry pulled me aside. "Maggie, can you help me? I just can't quite remember who that nice man is standing over there. I know I ought to be able to place him; do you know who he is?"

"Yes, as a matter of fact, I do," I answered. "That's Don Thompson."

Received at the CBG offices today was a letter from a publisher, who provided the birthdays for two staff members, so that they could be listed in This Week's Birthdays.

The additions were much appreciated. Thanks!

Classics International Entertainment reorganizes

Classics International Entertainment Inc. Chairman Richard S. Berger has announced a reorganization of the company he said was designed to streamline management functions and allow CIE to function more efficiently and cost-effectively.

The reorganization included several key personnel changes and the consolidation of administrative, buying, and marketing activities. He will also assume the role of Chief Executive Officer previously held by Geoffrey Talbot, who has left the company to pursue other interests.

Former Executive Vice President of New Business Development Gary Colabuono was appointed President and Chief Operating Officer of retail operations. All company-owned stores will report directly to Colabuono through a simplified retail structure.

Lawrence Strauss continues his current position as Vice President of Administration, which he has held since January 1994.

Administrative, buying, and marketing activities for Moondog's and Dream Factory stores currently taking place in Norwalk, Conn., will be consolidated into the CIE corporate headquarters in Chicago. The existing Dream Factory, Inc. positions of CEO, President, Vice President of Marketing, and Vice President of Purchasing, along with publishing positions, were eliminated. Duties previously handled by the staff holding these positions will be transferred to personnel based at corporate headquarters.

Additional changes include the following:

✸ Andrea Goldberg was promoted from Assistant Manager to Manager of New Business Development.

✸ James Percival will continue as Vice President of Development, coordinating real estate and construction activities.

✸ Director of Operations for Dream Factory stores Russell McDaniel was promoted to Eastern Regional Manager of retail operations, overseeing stores in Connecticut, New York, and New Jersey.

✸ Operations Manager for Moondog's stores Chris Ecker will become Midwest Regional Manager of retail operations, overseeing stores in Illinois and Ohio.

✸ General Manager of Moondog's stores Vincent Smith was named Director of Purchasing for all retail stores.

Store management structures will not be affected by the reorganization, and CIE is conducting a search for two new Chicago-based, corporate positions: Chief Financial Officer and Vice President of Marketing.

Berger said, "This reorganization is a most positive step for us. We have been able to build a strong management team with just the right combination of comics/pop culture retailing expertise and general business know-how. The changes also allow us to move forward with our retail expansion plans supported by a corporate structure that is both efficient and cost-effective."

Nickelodeon cartoon creators in L.A.

The Los Angeles Comic Book and Science Fiction Convention will offer an appearance by some of the creative staff behind several of Nickelodeon's cartoons on Sunday, Aug. 14. In addition, a five-hour Nicktoons Festival with showings of episodes of Ren & Stimpy, Rocko's Modern Life, Rugrats, and a preview of Ahh!!! Real Monsters, a new fall series, is planned.

At 2 p.m., Joe Murray, creator of Rocko's Modern Life; Arlene Klasky and Gabor Csupo, creators of Rugrats and Ahh!!! Real Monsters; and Bob Camp, creative director of Ren & Stimpy, will answer questions about their series and sign autographs after the question and answer session.

The one-day convention is located at the Shrine Auditorium Expo Center, 700 W. 32nd St., in Los Angeles near the University of Southern California campus. Show hours are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. For further information, call (818) 954-8432.

Comicfest is in Philadelphia Show will run Oct. 7-9

David Greenhill Promotions has changed the date and venue of Comicfest '94 to the home of last year's event, the Philadelphia Civic Center, on Columbus Day weekend. Formerly planned for later in the month at the Fort Washington Expo Center, the comics and collectibles convention will return to its original location Oct. 7-9. The Comicfest Expo trade show will also be held at the Civic Center on October 6, immediately preceding Comicfest '94.

The Civic Center was originally unavailable to Comicfest '94 due to an exhibit of Egyptian treasures scheduled for display in the fall. But a schedule change left the more than 200,000-square-foot center available, and company President David Greenhill wasted no time in seizing the opportunity.

"We had a very successful show here last year and we'd said all along, if we could return here, we would," Greenhill said. "We're very pleased we were able to return home, so to speak."

Show Manager Vinnie Bartilucci said, "I guess King Tut was a comic-book fan. Those hieroglyphics were one of the first comic strips, after all."

Last year's Comicfest reportedly drew more than 33,000 people, making it the largest comics and collectibles convention ever held in the United States. Show promoters said they plan to built on that success with an aggressive advertising and marketing campaign including radio, print, and TV advertising.

Greenhill said, "We introduced thousands of people to the fun of comics last year and we are looking forward to doing it again.We're looking to make Comicfest as much of a part of Philadelphia as cheesesteak and the Liberty Bell."

A preview of the DC/Malibu Star Trek: The Next Generation/Star Trek: Deep Space Nine crossover appears in Star Trek: Deep Space Nine #13 and Star Trek: Deep Space Nine: Hearts and Minds #3. The Malibu titles are scheduled to ship in August.

Fire Man Press of Milwaukee, Wis., will include trading cards with issues of Scud the Disposable Assassin. Issue #3 of the black-and-white series about the misadventures of a robot who escaped from prison is scheduled to ship in August.

'WildC.A.T.S' preliminary episode guide

By Rob Allstetter

Jim Lee described some episodes for the first season of CBS' WildC.A.T.S animated series:

✸ Dark Blade Falling: This is the first episode of the series. It introduces Helspont as well as the backstory of WildC.A.T.S. It also includes WarBlade's joining the team. WarBlade is Reno Bryce, the group's loose cannon, who denies his Kherubim heritage until Void makes him morph his hands into bio-molecular blades.

✸ Heart of Steel: This episode focuses on Spartan, the team leader who runs into an old flame whom he knew before he was placed into his cyborg body by Jacob Marlowe. "It's a story about balancing one's personal life with a sense of duty to the team," Lee said. "Being warriors, they don't have a lot of luxuries. In many ways, they have a higher calling and have to make great personal sacrifices to protect the world. That's heroism to me."

✸ Cry of the Coda: Zealot's featured in this episode. "We focus on Zealot's past, how she formed the Coda, why she left, and how the Coda has now become an aberration," Lee said. The episode includes Artemis and Pike as well as the villainous Troika: Slag, H.A.R.M., and Attica.

✸ The Evil Within: The spotlight's on Voodoo and Maul as well as a Daemonite plan to take possession of the President of the United States. Voodoo is Priscilla Kitaen, the youngest member of the WildC.A.T.S, who has the ability to see Daemonites within possessed host bodies. Maul is Jeremy Stone, who can grow to enormous size but at the risk of a corresponding loss of intelligence.

✸ An as-yet-untitled episode features Grifter, also known as Cole Cash. "It explores how a former con man and criminal can become a hero," said Lee, "kind of a different story for a Saturday-morning cartoon."

✸ Lives in the Balance: This episode spotlights the return of Majestyk, the Kherubim lord who takes over the WildC.A.T.S.

✸ Black Razor's Edge: This story involves Grifter and his brother, who is leader of the Black Razors, the fighting arm of the IO.

[From time to time, readers write to ask why this letters column is titled Oh, So? They assume it is a reference – but a reference to what?

Carl Barks, creator of Uncle Scrooge, is one of the industry's pioneers – as much a master of the tightly plotted story as of the hilarious sight gag. He used the phrase "Oh, so?" in a variety of ways – a variety with special pertinence to the sort of exchange you'll find in letters columns.

One of the delights we experienced preceding Don's death was the project whose fruits you see here: We swiftly scanned volume after volume of Another Rainbow's titanic reprinting of Barks' work in a hunt for instances of the use of "Oh, so?" I can't adequately convey the process: the sudden bursts of laughter, as a name or a speech or a situation broke us up.

Here, accompanied by credits, are a few of the examples:]

Walt Disney's Comics & Stories #218 (Nov 58) © The Walt Disney Company

Dave Stout

I am an "other, older" fan responding to Robert Johnston's letter in CBG #1074 – the one about the Justice Society. I already wrote Johnston a somewhat different form of this letter. I understand what he meant, but he and I don't see eye to eye.

I loved the Flash story that brought back the Vandal Savage and the JSA, and my friends and I were really excited about the first Crisis teamings with the JLA. Some people like to say about the days of the JSA and "Flash of Two Worlds" that those were more innocent times, which is so obviously wrong it must really be a lie; I was innocent, but the times were not.

As I remember it, in "Flash of Two Worlds" Jay Garrick commented that he was stiff after all these years and couldn't fit into his old uniform too well. That was touching. It was a little sad but also gave a feel of authenticity to the revived character. I vaguely remember Wonder Woman in the Vandal Savage story, saying something similar at the same time she said that it would be nice to get back together with the other JSAers. I thought that would be wonderful, literally "wonder-full."

That would have been when I was in the 8- to 12-year-old range, when I knew I was growing up and would very much have liked to have had some mentorly advice on how to grow up. So, if I was identifying with Barry Allen, I was thinking of Jay Garrick as someone who could give Barry tips on how to handle his secret identity and romances and such things. I found something important and moving in that implied (well, actually, I guess I was inferring it) senior-junior relationship.

Of course, that was in the early to mid-'60s, when the JSA would have been in their 40s and the "aging hero" problem less acute than now.

Green Arrow and Green Lantern – that is to say, Oliver Queen and Hal Jordan – also coped with being in their 40s when written, respectively, by Grell and Jones. I admired that.

Let me quote two key passages from Johnston's letter in order to bring into a sharper focus where I disagree with him.

"[The Kaminski/Parobeck JSA] were too real. They had one foot in the grave, and no one likes to be constantly hit over the head with a reminder of his own mortality. What makes these heroes special is that they can accomplish wonderful things that you and I cannot do. When the editors at DC chose to lessen them, to weaken them, to suddenly age them, it only served to remind us of how useless it is to struggle against the darkness that threatens to engulf us all. These ingredients, coupled with Mike Parobeck's grotesque art, translated into a series that never had a chance of succeeding."

And:

"...This, coupled with the fact that JSA was in limbo for five years, means that one could easily make a case for their being the same age as Batman/Bruce Wayne, or even younger."

As you can tell, what made the JSA special for me was that they were the first super group and that their existence provided a continuity with DC's past in the same way that the JLA provided a continuity across its present. Even at the time of their revival, the JSA's powers were not very special, since the JLA heroes had already duplicated them, and the really special cases, Doctor Fate and the Spectre, were only indifferently highlighted. I seriously doubt that there is one JSA-era character whose gimmicks or style or powers haven't been copied and beefed up in the long time since "Flash of Two Worlds." What still makes the JSA special is that they were the first, and what they have to say to today concerns what it's like to be a hero even when you're past your prime.

From the tone of Johnston's letter, I think he would like to see the JSA as they were in the '40s, which is what the JLA and Avengers were in the early '60s: the best of the super-heroes, brought together in solid friendship and mutual respect. It seems to me that comics (DC's and Marvel's, anyway) sorely need such teams. For my money, that was Len Kaminski's JSA.

Did you know that when he was 74, Jack Dempsey was mugged by a couple of teenagers? He put them in the emergency room.

Just a few days ago, the local paper ran a story on one of the most productive stockbrokers at a local branch of a major brokerage. The man is 90, and in his prime he was one of the most productive brokers on the West Coast. His clients include the great-grandchildren of some of his original clients. He is old and not as good as he was, but he still is better than most, which is to say he still has it.

For a while I worked for a guy in his late 80s who in his day had been one of the top management consultants in the country, and he still has plenty of business sense.

Most important for us comics readers is Will Eisner. He was a seminal influence when he started in the '30s, and 50 years later "Into the Heart of the Storm" is one of the best graphic novels around. This is much as if Dempsey had still been a contender for the heavyweight title at 74.

And that was the point of Kaminski's JSA: They might be old, but they're still heroes. In fact, they struck me as being more noble and heroic than any of the other super groups around. I really wish DC had not canceled the title.

That goes for the art, too. Johnston's letter described Parobeck's art as "grotesque"; Johnston obviously dislikes it. Based on the exaggeration and simplification of anatomy, Parobeck's work strikes me as less grotesque than Kirby's or Ditko's (which I revere) and far less than Liefield's (which I would detest, if I wanted to bother with it at all). In fact, I'm already on record in this letters column as believing that Parobeck is among the best at storytelling, composition, simplification of form, and suppleness of line. I absolutely love his work currently on Batman Adventures, which also strikes me as among the best-written of what the Big Two currently offer.

All that notwithstanding, Johnston is dead right about DC's playing rough and mean with some of the JSA. For one, Wes Dodds had a stroke so that he couldn't inconvenience Karen Berger, Neil Gaiman, or Matt Wagner, and as a character he got off lucky. The original Black Canary might be currently dead in order to smooth over continuity for Roy Thomas and to avoid confusion with her daughter, who just recently broke up with Ollie Queen. The Spectre won't be available until Ostrander or his successor is through with him, and what has been going on in his comic book so far makes it difficult for him to fit back into the happy 40s JSA.

And then there's Doctor Fate. There has been far too much weirdness for Fate to come back as he was before. For me, the aggravation that started to alienate me from the character happened early on, when a move was made to bust up his marriage to Inza. (Busting up successful marriages seems to be comic-book shorthand for character development, though to my mind it is the exact opposite of character growth. I always thought one of the uniquely neat things about the Schwartz-Fox-Kubert revived Hawkman was that he was happily married.)

After that came the disastrous inclusion of the Lords of Order and Chaos in DF's storyline, in which Order and Chaos, which are aesthetic principles that have been applied to logic, math, and science, became confused with the moral principles Good and Evil. It took the character ages to get out of that dead end, and by then the inherent creepiness of the original relationship between Kent Nelson and the persona of Doctor Fate became a jumping off point for no-longer innocent minds.

And I wonder whether Johnston even knows what happened to Alan Scott? In Green Lantern Quarterly the Golden Age GL got mysteriously reverse-aged. He became a hot, buff, ripped hunk of a super-hero in a flashy new uniform and he was trying to cope with having a wife past mandatory retirement age and two adult children who were only maybe 10 years physically younger than he was. Then they canceled GLQ and left Alan in a worse limbo than Roy Thomas did.

Speaking of Roy Thomas, if there is a JSA revival, I'd rather not have him at the helm. For all his knowledge and understanding of the characters and his great love for them, Roy tended to saddle them with awfully busy plots. He has always had a penchant for chatty dialogue and overly elaborate plots with too many big, moving parts. Too often his dialogue became stilted, because his characters were trying to make plot points far beyond their conversational limits and then rushed to make characterization points, as well. This was as true when he started at Marvel in the middle/late '60s as it is today. (Once, when the Crisis on Infinite Earths was looming, he had an All Star story in which it seemed that everybody was indoors chatting away while waiting out a rainstorm of word balloons.

So, the way I see it, exiling the JSA to an Elder Edda limbo was yet another plot that had too many big, moving parts. At the time it must have seemed the best way to resolve the creative differences that sprang up between the pre-Crisis continuity and DC's subsequent needs (which is to say, between the All-Star stories that Thomas wanted to write and the new constraints placed on him). Until the dust settled (and we found out that, contrary to explicit statements in comic books and the press, not even the heroes remembered the pre-Crisis continuity), the JSA was a major sore point in the DC universe. DC's original super-heroes simply couldn't be around while everyone else was re-establishing him- or herself.

(Here's an important demurral: If you think I'm trying to vilify Roy Thomas, I'm not. The point I'm trying to make is that his ability to devise elaborate and wide-ranging plots can override his instincts for telling good stories. I admire, for example, his creation of the character of Iron Munro and the subsequent telling of the "best parts" version of Gladiator in Young All-Stars. Also admirable is the ingenuity with which he brought Thor more in line with the Norse mythology of the Elder Edda, ca. issues #270-285, though I think his subsequent inclusion of Wagner's Ring cycle and some loose ends of Thor-related and other Marvel apocalyptica was another example of a plot crushing the story.)

Johnston's letter ends with a description of his general withdrawal from comics, and it begins with his wanting to protest in the strongest manner possible DC's treatment of the JSA.

I think he already protested in the strongest manner possible: He stopped buying the comic books. Of course, one of the nastiest manners of protesting would have been to mail the latest issue back to DC. I did that with a Squadron Supreme, sending it to Ralph Macchio with a letter that said I didn't want to own something with such wretched printing. (Remember the ugly little surprises waiting for us in those days when we bought comic books printed at Sparta?) Marvel sent me another copy and a letter of excuse. Also, back when Arnold Drake was writing X-Men and the group had split up, my friend Ted tore up a copy and mailed it to Marvel's offices. The X-Men re-banded soon after.

Gee, these memories are so warm, I should not have ignored them for so long.

Say, gang, yesterday, June 22, in the post-Hal Jordan Green Lantern that just came out, I saw what looks like an announcement that next issue we'll be treated to an appearance by that new, hot, buff, ripped hunk of a super-hero in a flashy new uniform, the Golden Age Green Lantern. Why don't you make a special effort to buy next month's GL?

You can bet I will.

FIT to PRINT

catherine yronwode

THIS IS FIT TO PRINT NUMBER 495: Well, i couldn't stick it out in Times. I'm back to Palatino. It's just a nicer font.

IN THE NEWS: As i write this, O. J. Simpson is riding the Freeway of Doom, reportedly with a gun to his head. Cliches like "how can this be?" and "but he was such a nice guy" are on everybody's lips, and only the astute reporters punctuate their commentary with the words "innocent until proven guilty."

I have received three calls so far from people who want to know if O. J. will be featured in a series of "Killer Trading Cards." Will there be a comic book about him? Enquiring minds want to know.

Legally, the issue of O. J. Simpson's pending arrest for two murders opens a very interesting can of worms. Remember that First Amendment case in Nassau County, New York, where the American Civil Liberties Union is challenging the county's new law against distributing or selling any trading card "depicting a heinous criminal" to a person under 17 years of age? Sure you do—i mentioned it just a couple of weeks ago.

Well, as you all know, O. J. Simpson's picture has appeared on trading cards in connection with his football career. If he is convicted of the murder of his wife and her friend, he will be a "heinous criminal" as defined in the Nassau County trading card law. From that point on, any child possessing a trading card with his picture on it could inform on the retailer who sold him or her the card and send said retailer up the river for one year.

Do you know why? Because the law does not spell out whether the "heinous criminal" on the card had to be convicted before he was "depicted" or not! The way it is written, once a person is found guilty of murder, kidnapping, rape, arson, or robbery, he or she is a "heinous criminal" and any trading card bearing his or her likeness—no matter when it was published!—is off-limits for anyone under 17.

Do i hear the bidding starting on those O. J. Simpson cards?

WHAT HE DID: And what did O. J. do? Let's leave aside the question of the murder warrants right now. Let's look at his conviction record.

He was a wife batterer.

It has been hard for fans to understand that. He was such a gentle guy, so good looking, so talented both on the playing field and off. He had a charming smile, he gave to charities, he was a role model to millions of kids. And he beat his wife, regularly, frequently, severely.

I used to live with a man who hit me and slapped and kicked me. Like O. J., he was an otherwise gentle guy. He had a charming smile, he gave to charities.

O. J. left a note before taking off, in which he—the man who beat his wife—declared he was a "battered husband." The man who beat me also had that delusion. One time, after rushing across the room, throwing me to the floor, and kicking me in the ribs, he blurted out, "I'm going to call the police! You're battering me!"

This has nothing to do with comic books. (Oh, i could stretch it and bring in Hank Pym of the Avengers, but why bother?) Yet the chances are that several readers of this paper are suffering spousal abuse right now. Some otherwise gentle person with a charming smile who gives to charities is about to assault some CBG reader or be assaulted by one.

Don't think it's true? Well, after i was free of the man who beat me, i told my story to a friend. I expressed lingering disbelief that this guy—"a card-carrying member of the ACLU"—had abused me for so long. "That's nothing," she said, "I spent ten years being battered by a Pulitzer Prize winning poet."

If there is anything to learn from the Simpson tragedy, it's that society must take a long, hard look at spousal abuse. If you who are reading this are being hurt at home, please call for help NOW. Take my word on this; it will not get better. You will be lonely and terrified without your abuser, but you deserve a life free from fear.

Trust me. I know.

values?

To me, heroes are usually the main characters in a comic-book story, the ones whom we are supposed to sympathize with and care about in the midst of their various storylines and personal crises, no matter how long and drawn-out or absurd certain aspects of the story or character are.

The first time I heard of the term "hero" was when Mego was selling its line of action figures.

To me heroes – and anti-heroes – serve as examples, rather than role models.

Wolverine had a rough adolescence and a mysterious past where some scientists intended for him to be Weapon-X by inserting adamantium and tampering with his memories. His solo comic book didn't become interesting until #50 and again in #75, where these matters were addressed and the adamantium was removed, the healing factor seemingly revoked, and Logan had to face life on new terms. To this point, Wolverine stories tended to be extremely repetitious with Logan proclaiming himself "the best at what he is!"

As a reader I usually said, "Thank you, but I think I'll check out the rest." Ever since #75, I've been a steady reader and feel that Logan is a much better character now that his future and fights down the line will be filled with uncertainty and will be hard-won.

The Punisher had a bad day, lost his family, and he's out for revenge but also looking for purpose with his lifetime. Because readers know Frank Castle intimately, we can sympathize with him. Otherwise he would remain an enigma – no better, no worse than the next gun-toting vigilante. He is not evil; he does not kill indiscriminately; but he has the potential as well as the next person.

Azrael is the interim Batman. Whereas Bruce Wayne trained himself physically and mentally to be Batman, Azrael depends on constant modification of his armor to be Gotham's Dark Knight. The armor shuts him in, insulating him against all but the voices of St. Dumas and his dead father. Azrael was programmed at birth. He had no say in the matter; he must struggle against the program, master it or be in thrall to it. This is his immediate goal, rather than usurping the identity of Batman and wearing armor that rivals the appearance of Tony Stark's Iron Lobster Man look.

On the topic of comic-book character deaths, I would like to cite Jor-El and Lara as well as Ma and Pa Kent as depicted in The Origin of Superman by Infantino, Swan, Anderson, and Bridwell in the '70s. Both sets of parents influenced Superman in their own way – his birth parents saving him as an infant from a dying planet and the Kents adopting him, loving him as one of their own, and by their deaths showing him mortality, reverence for life, and responsibility that his super powers could aid his adopted home.

In this story, one of the first I read, the United Nations agreed on something for once by giving Supes honorary citizenship in all their countries. This is how the origin of Superman looked in the '70s, just as it reflected the times in the '80s with John Byrne, and in the '40s with Wayne Boring. Boring's Superman was truly the man of tomorrow with his heroic appearance and incredible feats. The Superman by Infantino, Swan, and Anderson was vintage Earth-One – sleek, a muscular man in a tight costume. Infantino's layouts emphasized the Man of Steel's speed and dynamics. Swan and Anderson, to me, were the consummate Superman team of the '70s: Their Superman was friendly, not menacing, and in the stories the reader had the impression that nothing really bad would happen, in the same tone as C.C. Beck's Captain Marvel stories. In short, Superman is the Super-hero.

Regarding Douglas Randolph's letter (CBG #1072):

1) Superman is tall, dark-haired, and handsome. Dean Cain is tall, dark-haired, and handsome. It is not like he has zits or anything.

2) Use your imagination.

3) I prefer the show's tone of concentrating on Clark's learning to reconcile his two identities as well as learning on the job, as opposed to having action to the detriment of the supporting cast and the Lois/Clark relationship.

Regarding the preemption of Lois and Clark: The Adventures of Superman by the ABC news department: Remember, these are the guys who thought that Buckwheat was still alive and working in a supermarket.

Regarding Steve Rock's letter of "dud" episodes of The Flash: I felt that the "Mirror Master" episode was contrived; Stasia Masters was girlfriend to both Barry and Sam Scudder. The "Android" episode would have been better, if Alpha had been a genetically enhanced human rather than a synthetic being, though it was nice to see Dick Miller have better luck with this particular Terminator.

According to TV Guide, it seems that CBS is planning a Six Million Dollar Man movie. Much as I loved the "Bigfoot" and "Space Probe" episodes, I'd rather see a Flash movie. In the June 25 issue, John Wesley Shipp said that CBS honcho Howard Stringer said, "If we hadn't messed up, that show would still be on the air." Shipp receives tons of fan mail for The Flash from Europe and South America, where the show is still on television.

You can probably guess what I'm going to say next: Write to Letters Department, TV Guide, Radnor, Pa. 19088, asking them to forward your comments to Howard Stringer at CBS concerning The Flash. If it is good enough to be broadcast in Spanish, French, Italian, etc. in other countries, then it should be shown once again in English.

Thanks for bearing with me on that subject once again.

Regarding Charles Skaggs' wish list:

10) I'd also like to see the JSA again.

9) Ditto with Batgirl.

8) A JLA with purpose.

7) Monarch was a silly character with a silly costume. Why couldn't a super-villain have become him, instead? Dove was an extraordinary character. Bring her back and dump Hawk.

6) Maybe "Zero Hour" can negate "Emerald Twilight."

5) More insight into Green Arrow.

4) The weak point of "Knightquest" was Shondra Kinsolving having the ability to heal Bruce and regress mentally into a child, to be discarded at story's end.

3) A Wonder Woman with a purpose.

2) Titans with a purpose.

1) Barry Allen Flash in comics as well as one straight to video by Peter David. If he could do

Amid all this talk about "Zero" this summer, I actually saw (or thought I saw) a reference to a character called Zero Hero. As any long-time reader of CBG knows, the first appearance of a character called Zero Hero was in these pages, along about 1974 or so – a creation of my own personal fevered brain.

Enclosed are a few drawings I've done of the character – including a cover I did for CBG when it was TBG (#133, to be precise).

No, I'm probably not going to sue anyone for stealing the name of my copyrighted character. Well, no, now that I think of it, maybe –

Trancers, then he could do The Flash, as his first issue of Time and Tide with Barry and The Trickster readily attests.

0) 12¢ comic books from now on. The Silver Age by James Robinson concentrating on Captain Comet, Doom Patrol, Animal Man, Green Arrow, Aquaman, Flash, and JLA.

Regarding John Rozum's letter concerning Self's article: Catwoman is not pornographic; she is intelligent, self-confident, and independent. If Selina Kyle existed in the real world, she would probably write a letter to Self concerning this sparsely researched article, sue for libel, or even be prominently featured as the ideal example of the working woman in a cosmetics ad, though Selina doesn't need any to be her special self or dress in an acceptable conservative manner.

The size of her breasts are irrelevant, and her whip is probably poised toward his eyes, anyway, if he's lucky.

Betty in Bondage is not approved by the Comics Code.

EX Comics usually had twist endings as well as irony, but there was always a lesson to be learned in Crime Suspensories and Weird Science. The majority of the readers of Self might be prime candidates for buying comics from the Home Shopping Network.

It is not so much journalism as a slam job. It would be simple to associate Self with other magazines that are 90% advertisements for beauty aids, videos, and Sum: computer editing of models figures and trick photography, assimilation into society through designer clothes and surgery.

I wish Resume luck. That magazine could do far worse than refuse his generous offer. I can't help but think, if the comics article is slanted, then perhaps it is not the only one. It's a true disservice to the reader, who should always depend on more than one source for information.

I recommend Resume refer primarily to the Milestone comic books. My favorite is Icon; the character of Rocket is going through a real experience, one which none of the other female comics characters have been through before. The Milestone characters are new and fresh, their future is uncharted, and the possibilities are greater than Marvel or DC's. If you stop reading Marvel or DC for a year or two and then come back, chances are things have remained relatively the same – no great upheavals, no pregnancies, no return from the dead nonsense, no overdone crossovers or overpriced special covers or populated leftovers. This is Milestone's strength: lower prices than Defiant; no sudden time changes like Image or Valiant; no chicks posing during a battle as in X-Men or an Image comic book; and no long, drawn-out dragged-out plot lines.

If the example of Rocket doesn't convey the relevance, entertainment, and relative cheap entertainment value (and the improvement of your vocabulary), the fine art, professionalism of comics storytellers, and the non-threat of being overwhelmed by the cloying scent of the latest perfume insert, then nothing will.

Regarding the editorial in issue #1074: You were lucky. My parents were married nine years, and I haven't seen my father since 1976. I'm an only child still going to a university. You two were in love and were lucky. Neff said.

I wish to thank you for the honor of having my letter printed in CBG. It is good to see that I'm not the only one interested in collecting and reading comics and sharing my opinions over adaptations of comics creations from coast to coast. It is a real privilege, and I hope to keep on doing it as long as I can.

Once again, I find myself staring down from the edge of my plank.

As retailers, we've all watched Marvel creep up the price ladder for several years now. We saw every issue of "X-Cutioners Song" arrive bagged with a card and an extra quarter on the price tag and we hoped customers wouldn't notice DC was doing the same thing with Legionnaires and The Batman Adventures for no extra charge.

We saw Marvel offer choices between enhanced and regular covers on several of its issues and we wondered why sometimes it still forced us to buy enhancements, such as Blaze, Force Works, and Venom. We didn't even balk at the fact that Marvel seemed incapable of reprinting a comic book, such as Marvel Tales and Sabretooth Classics, for less than $1.50.

But now, Marvel has made another decision to gauge the gullibility of the market. I am referring to the editorial decision by Marvel Comics to publish the X-titles in two versions: the standard $1.50 version and the glossy $1.95 version. On the surface, it appears Marvel is trying to give everyone a choice. Upon further review, the customers and retailers get nothing more than a carefully

Letters to RADICAL DREAMER

Welcome to the first letters page for Radical Dreamer. Allow me to explain. Radical Dreamer is a color, Poster Format comic published by Blackball Comics and Mark's Giant Economy Size Comics. Because of the unique format of Radical Dreamer, there is no good place in each issue to run a letters column. But my readers do like to write, and I want to answer them. My solution was to run this letters column in issues of CBG. If you haven't read Radical Dreamer, then allow me to introduce you:

In the world of the Future — in the year 3054 — in an age when we have become dependent upon a broadcast entertainment network for our very Dreams — the time has come when our souls are laid bare to invasion. Only one man stands between our Dreams and the Invaders. Max Wrighter is the Radical Dreamer. And though he may give his life to protect us —
DREAMS CANNOT DIE!

Howard B. Kook
North Bergen, New Jersey

Dear Mr. Wheatley,

My immediate response to Radical Dreamer is to the format. It serves to make Radical Dreamer readily stand out in the buying public's mind; an easy way of creating a definable identity. The obvious advantage is that it allows you to use a bigger splash page/panel. There is a caveat: We, as a comic-shop frequenting audience have become accustomed to promotional posters (and cover enhancements of every type). I don't believe the more experienced comics reader, at whom this project is likely aimed, will be supportive if other, more creative uses, are not brought to light.

The enlarged format would allow experimentation using interlocking panels, or greater flexibility in juxtaposing images in adjoining panels. A page Neal Adams had done for his stint on DC's Deadman (in Strange Adventures) comes to mind. You may be familiar with it: Elements which were not central to the action in any isolated panel blend to form Deadman's face when the overall page layout is seen from arm's length.

The only way I can see this experiment being successful is to use the openness of this enlarged format in unusual ways. Gimmicks, standing on their own, won't carry the day with today's comic-buying, jaded audience.

That's not to say that I don't wish you all the success in the world. I'll be supporting this project for just as long as you continue to show the originality of thought and artistic independence promised by this prologue.

"[Radical Dreamer is a] book that you positively shouldn't pass up. I found this one of the most entertaining and captivating books that I've encountered in quite some time." — Brett Brooks, Comic Shop News

"Wheatley's Radical Dreamer is a welcome alternative to comic superheroes. And it doesn't hurt that it's a BIG read!" — Lurene Haines, Getting Into The Business Of Comics

"Radical Dreamer is a great piece of work!" — Kenneth Smith, Succubus, Phantasmagoria

■Howard, I don't consider the Poster Format of Radical Dreamer to be a gimmick. This is the way I want to tell stories. I have always loved the full page Sunday Comics from the early years of this century, as well as the large magazine layouts from the 1920's and 1930's. The potential for graphic excitement in a Poster Format comic is essentially untapped. The Neal Adams example you cite is only one of many ways to create surprising and satisfying story-telling in this larger display and I'm sure I'll end up using all of them in the coming years on Radical Dreamer. My only concern is to be true to my story. I will not trick up the tale just for the sake of cleverness — only when it supports the emotion and content. Story telling is my primary concern, but the story of Radical Dreamer is set in a future world that is larger than life. I believe I'll need every inch of my Poster Format to show RAD's cities, seas, and jungles to their best advantage. There is nothing quite like a four page spread to establish a sense of wonder with a wide-screen panorama. I think you may be selling Radical Dreamer's audience short. After all, if you can find joy in the characters and story then I believe others can too. This is an exciting, yet frustrating time in the comic industry. Much of our audience, even though it has grown in numbers, has been trained away from reading by gimmicks and stunts. I am convinced that the only gimmick that has any hope of working over the long haul of a regular series is a combination of love and commitment for the material and solid characters and story-telling. I intend to get as many people as possible to help me prove it by reading Radical Dreamer! Thanks for writing and stay in touch.

"With Radical Dreamer, Wheatley has brought his dreams to reality!" — Dave Dorman, Aliens: Tribes

Mark, Mark, Mark,

Welcome back. Radical Dreamer #0 is a delight that far surpassed my expectations.

At last! Someone bold enough to innovate in format! The 16-page, fold-out Poster Format has got my mind churning with loads of new possibilities. It's fun to read. It's a blast to unfold it bigger & bigger! As the story unfolded, I at first thought it might be unwieldy when fully opened. But the paperstock is excellently chosen: it was perfect! It held up well but wasn't at all heavy.

But really, it's so good to see Radical Dreamer. Your art is beautiful and pushes all my right buttons. The colors are exquisite. (I'm up to VOL. VI of The Complete Little Nemo in Slumberland, so I know what "exquisite color" is!!!) The characters are alive. The story flows - I had a little trouble figuring panel order here and there, but those sorts of things happen now & again.

Altogether: fun format, beautiful art, engaging story. In short, a great, innovative comic I'm glad my local store had the foresight to order.

■From the other material Trevor sent with his letter I understand that he organizes groups to play games of all kinds. This gave me the idea for a special issue of Radical Dreamer where I turn the Poster Format into Twister Format! I can see it now; several people all twisted and tied into knots attempting to read RAD all at the same time! Thanks for all the great feedback, Trevor. And I promise to work very hard to keep panel order as clear as possible in the future.

Dear Mr. Wheatley,

It was hard to track down, but I am proud to say I can get Radical Dreamer through my local comics shop! Trust me, this is no small feat! Blackball Comics of any kind just weren't being ordered by any comics shop I could track down in South Carolina. But that was until the demands prompted our local comic retailers to rethink their orders. Now we at least have an adequate supply of Radical Dreamer and the rest of the Blackball dudes. Fans rejoice, and frolic in the streets!

Your concept, as soon as I heard about it, intrigued me deeply. I soon looked forward every month to the latest installment of the RAD one in each Hero Illustrated. And Radical Dreamer #0 didn't disappoint me. I loved the poster-like pages (although it was tough determining in what order the "pages" went). So here I am writing you to tell you how much I like RAD. Keep up the good work!

P.S. Please send me the Radical Dreamers Newsletter. Thanks, Mark!

■Sterling, you are proof-positive that asking your retailer for a comic, works! Thanks from the bottom of my heart for your efforts and I hope readers across the country will follow your fine example. And, yes, I suppose that first time reading a Poster Format comic can be as much a learning experience as the first trip through a regular comic. My parents still have trouble figuring out how balloons, caption boxes and panels are all supposed to work together. We read so many comics in our lives that we tend to forget that this form is a language all it's own. Fortunately, once you get through your first Poster Format comic, all the others to come will be a breeze! And, because you wrote, you are now on my mailing list for the FREE Radical Dreamers Newsletter. I publish this newsletter about four times a year and offer news, opinions, and access to back issues and special Radical Dreamer products. All anyone has to do is send me a letter with their name and address to get on the list.

Mr. Wheatley,

I've finally gotten the opportunity to write to you about your current project: Radical Dreamer. I enjoyed your Breathtaker mini-series (from Vertigo), and I find myself drawn into the strange world of Max's DreamNet. My only complaint is the difficulty of finding your comic (along with any other Blackball titles). I only found a copy of RAD #0 when I happened to glance at a rack in an unfamiliar shop. I'm not entirely sure, but I think Blackball is currently on hiatus, no? If this is the case, only the one pagers in Hero will be running the RAD story for a while...which is disappointing.

Anyway, just wanted to let you know I enjoy the title emmensly, and look forward to finding future issues of Radical Dreamer. Thanks, and good luck to you.

■David, sounds like you need to ask your retailer for Radical Dreamer! Or that other shop is not going to remain so unfamiliar, is it? I'm glad you asked about Blackball Comics — BLACKBALL COMICS (THE PUBLISHING COMPANY) IS NOT, I REPEAT, NOT ON HIATUS! The anthology title, Blackball Comics is on hiatus. I know there have been some confused reports in the media about this, but Blackball is still alive and publishing. Three issues of Radical Dreamer will have been published by the time you read this, and more are on the way. If you have not been looking for these issues, then rush out to your comic shop and start asking for Radical Dreamers #0, #1 & #2 now! And look out for the Dream Collection in August (a bagged set of RAD #0 & #1) and the* Blackball Comics Special (featuring a Reality Knight story) also in August.

Marvel appears to be reacting to the fact that other companies, such as Image, can get away with charging more for their comic books and attributing it to such production costs as better quality paper and computerized coloring. Marvel is guilty of a fallacy here, because, as a rule, independents have always had higher prices. Operating expenses are greater, because they have higher printing costs due to the comparatively lower over-all print runs of their publishing lines. Surely, Marvel has the largest over-all publishing output of any company on the planet and, therefore, the lowest printing costs. Marvel should be able to produce a comic book of comparable quality for less and still make more money.

However, the big argument I have with Marvel is not its decision to improve the quality of its comics, but Marvel's pretension of giving the public a choice about the X-titles. Marvel will still produce deluxe and regular editions of each X-title. However, the regular editions will ship two weeks after the deluxe editions hit the racks. Where is the choice for retailers? Stores in competition with each other cannot risk being scooped on a new comic book, so they have to order the deluxe editions and hope their customers can understand another Marvel price increase. I can only assume Marvel will keep up this pretense for several months, then switch to the higher price for its entire line and proclaim the experiment a success. I'm sorry, but I think an issue of X-Men printed on a paper sack and given a two-week head start would outsell both the deluxe and the regular editions. For a real scientific survey, release both versions simultaneously.

Then we can really see what the fans want.

I have spoken to several retailers who are at wit's end about this month's order. If the titles were to ship at the same time, retailers would easily go with the lower-priced issue. As it is, the two-week delay will force them to order the deluxe editions to prevent their competition from getting the edge on them. Retailers and collectors alike are tiring of higher-cost enhanced covers, but Marvel doesn't seem to get the message. It points to its sales and says the deluxe editions are outselling the regular editions.

What Marvel does not take into account is that many of those comics are bought by huge chains, such as Wal-Mart and Hastings, who neither participate in nor care one iota about supporting the back-issue market. That same back-issue market is one of the few advantages retailers have over the huge chains, and Marvel has recently taken an unsolicited potshot at that advantage. Marvel cares? Marvel Mart.

I now consider myself primarily a reader of comics and an aspiring writer. I recently got out of retailing, and, likewise, my collecting and speculating days are behind me. Theoretically, I am the target audience Marvel claims to want to hang on to. I grew up reading Marvel Comics, from Marvel Team-Up #44 until now. However, every time I hear of another price increase or a useless crossover or a temporary "death," it drives another nail into the heart of this Marvel zombie.

Thanks for letting me vent.

Thank you for printing my letter in the April 29 issue of CBG. And, although I'm sure Peter David appreciates the editing of my letter and that Harlan Ellison is even more appreciative, it should come as no surprise to you that I would like to protest your careful, selective censorship of large portions of it.

Censoring my letter in the way that you did was clearly an attempt to protect Harlan Ellison from himself. If I was more cynical, I would have expected this from two editors who are on record as members of Friends of Ellison and antipathetic to any criticism of their friend.

This is not the first time that you have suppressed criticism of Ellison in the pages of CBG, either by deleting such criticism entirely from letters you print or by simply not publishing such critical letters you receive at all. An example of the later comes from my friend Bill Willingham, who related an amusing anecdote about Ellison is a letter to CBG that, although moderate in its censure, did not cast him in the hagiographically humanitarian light you insist upon as the official and only acceptable portrait of the great man to appear in your pages. In fact, Bill tells me that after he had written the letter, he asked Don on two separate occasions if you intended to print his letter, and on both occasions Don had assured him it would be printed. Of course, the letter was never published.

Readers of an independent bent of mind who want to make judgements based on the merits of all the evidence available should be rightly offended by your prejudicial editing.

As to my letter, I take issue with your editorial comment following it that, "a very large portion of your letter was cut for irrelevance." In fact, the portion you cut out was absolutely relevant to my argument; your truncating it and thereby weakening my argument was, I believe, purposeful, and had nothing whatsoever to do with its lack of relevance. Quite the opposite; if what you excised was not relevant, you wouldn't have deleted it.

I stated that, "CBG applies an institutionalized double standard to its coverage of me and Ellison," and proceeded to offer evidence of this by quoting analogous criticism Ellison and I leveled against specific individuals and pointing out that your and Peter David's responses to those criticisms were not similarly analogous. By cutting out my quotations by Ellison, you rendered my argument impossible to assess by your readers.

(If I may say so, your censorship was a little sloppy; you must have accidentally left in my line that read, "Compare, for example, David's and CBG's reactions to two examples of Ellison's and my 'putting people's noses out of joint,'" which makes no sense after you deleted my example of Ellison, which must have left your readers somewhat puzzled. How, after all, could they compare the two examples, when you deleted one of them entirely? Your introduction to my letter may further have prejudiced your readers against me insofar as you implied that I had used "language inappropriate to many of our readers," when in fact all such language contained exclusively in questions or paraphrases of Ellison.)

You wrote, ". . .when you excoriated Harlan for criticizing dead people (in defense about your position about Carol Kalish), you overlooked one significant aspect: Harlan's criticisms were echoes of remarks he had made repeatedly about the same people when they were alive." Quite apart from the bizarre critical etiquette you posit, which is entirely irrelevant to defining the legitimacy of merit of criticism, the fact is I have criticized Carol Kalish both in print as well as in private discussions with her (see my editorial in Journal #76 for an example of the former). Since you apparently don't read the Journal, I fail to understand how you could have made such an assertion of fact. Moreover, Carol knew precisely how I felt about the use to which she was putting her skills, and we discussed this fundamental philosophical disagreement on more than one occasion.

As to the second part of your etiquette argument, I seriously doubt if Ellison ever criticized Gene Roddenberry's sex life "repeatedly" while Roddenberry was alive. Could you summon proof of this, please? I suspect the real reason you deleted Ellison's criticisms is because they were irresponsible, possibly false, and potentially libelous, that my criticism of Kalish was moderate and entirely reasonable, and that the juxtaposition of the two would prove my assertion that your loyalty to Ellison is intellectually and morally inconsistent, that it is, indeed, irrational, and that you practice a double standard regarding the two of us.

You also deleted a paragraph wherein I related Don's accusation that I wrote a negative review of Will Eisner's work out of personal malice, and pointed out that this was untrue, that I denied it at the time Don made his accusation, and that Don never issued a retraction of apology. Why was this irrelevant? Don's falsely impugning my motives and then refusing to retract his accusation would appear to be absolutely relevant to charges questioning the journalistic integrity of CBG. Would you like to call Will and ask him his opinion? The fact that you won't retract falsehoods perpetuated about me, that you go so far as to delete references to such falsehoods in an effort to keep your readers ignorant of them, is damning proof that you cannot adequately address the issues I brought up to your readership.

As to your assertion that "denying you were a founding member [of Victims of Ellison] seems to be a matter of splitting hairs infinitely thin. What requirements for being a 'founding member' did you not fulfill?" I don't think it's up to me to prove my "innocence" so much as it's up to you to prove my "guilt."

The question should be turned around. What evidence do you have that I am a founding member? Far from "splitting hairs infinitely thin," this is as clear-cut an issue as you could ever hope to find: I was not a founding member of VOE, period. As to what requirements for being a founding member I did not fulfill, let's see: The very idea of the organization wasn't mine; I didn't help conceptualize the purpose and function of the organization; I didn't write a single word of its advertising or its newsletter; I devoted no resources, financial or otherwise, to the organization; I had nothing whatsoever to do with the organization's mailings. Do you know of any requirements I did fulfill? Facts remain, stubbornly, facts. If there is any evidence that I am a founding member, would you either please provide it, or issue a retraction and apologize for having so accused me?

There were, as you know only too well, other parts of my letter that you deleted, all of which weakened my central argument. I use the word censorship above advisedly; please spare me your schoolmarmish lectures on its dictionary definition.

Many CBG readers read only CBG, which is to say that you have a captive audience. This unfortunate fact only increases the weight of your responsibility to air both sides of a dispute fairly and impartially, which is to say, to allow each party to present his case as strongly as he possibly can.

Given your admitted a priori bias (i.e., your membership in the Friends of Ellison), the only fair and honest way to have treated my letter would have been to have run it uncensored. By censoring my letter, you carefully manipulated the information you allowed your readers to see so as to protect Ellison from his own mouth and to maintain the feasibility of the official CBG party line. You have done me and your readers a disservice. You have also done yourselves a disservice.

[Readers who want to track all this back can refer to CBG issues #1052, page 90; #1060, page 122; #1065, page 118; and #1067, page 8. Those readers who do so will also find that many explanations to points you raise have already been given, such as why we found (and I find) it logical to term you a founding member. (You were, as we said, one of the first four members of EOE/VOE and were listed in the prospectus of that group as among the "principal personnel." We never said you were the first member or the sole founder or the club secretary. I assume you could have added that you didn't hold meetings at your house, didn't suggest people to whom the newsletter could be sent, etc. From the beginning of its existence as a group, you were a member – hence, founding member.)

But this is running far too long. People who care can check those issues for themselves.

No schoolmarmish discussion of censorship? How about an explanation of the basics of the CBG letters column? Here are just a few of the guidelines we developed in more than a decade of conducting discussions in a forum our readers have consistently voted as their first- or second-favorite feature in the publication.

First, look at the box on page 8. (This has been running for some time, and anyone writing letters to a variety of publications will realize it's one of the most-open, least-restrictive letters department policies in publishing.): I can't answer letters that don't run in Oh, So? Letters will be edited. Letters may be cut for length or for other reasons. I will answer the letters, unless the author of the response is otherwise indicated.

Got it this time?

OK.

CBG goes into some elementary schools, reaches other pre-teen readers, and is sold in some areas in which retailers want to be able to make it available to children. So many four-letter and similar words are out. Doesn't matter who says 'em. Doesn't matter why they're said.

How about gratuitous insults? Those are cut wherever possible. Creator X is a jerk. Retailer Y is fat. Company Z cheats its creators. Artist A misses his deadlines. Doesn't mean there are no discussions of behavior or appearance or business. Doesn't always mean the material can't be reworked, if there's a point that needs to be raised for discussion. But insults for the sake of insults are cut wherever possible.

Length. As readers drift off to sleep, because a discussion has far exceeded their interest — or as a reply exceeds the length of the material originally discussed — I look for places to cut. This applies whether the letter comes from a correspondent or the reply comes from me.

Bad language, gratuitous insults, length.

Think about it.

There are other rules Don and I developed over many years (because we were running a letters column for comics folks before we became editors of CBG — come to think of it, since 1961). We didn't interrupt the letter-writer in the middle of his or her letter. We corrected the spelling wherever possible (no matter what the temptation was to leave it as it was). We corrected the grammar wherever possible (ditto). We ran the full name and address unless requested not to do so. We pitched out anonymous letters without reading them. We didn't run letters that began, "You'll never convince me that — " (Why bother?)

And, of course, no publication is required to run all the mail it receives. If CBG *did that, readers would (a) find it boring and (b) hate to see news and other features crowded out. (*CBG has room to run far less than half the mail that comes in.) Editors look for fresh topics and unusual approaches; when letters columns get to the point at which they're running responses to responses to responses, it's time to cut it off. Everyone wants to get the last word in, but there's a time to end it.

Which I'm doing now.

Censorship occurs when someone not connected with a publication forces an editor to change his policies.

This is in reply to Trina Robbins' comments regarding Lois & Clark in CBG #1075. As a woman, I must take exception to her statements.

Yes, Dean Cain is cute; so is Teri Hatcher. Is this the standard by which Robbins expects us to judge a TV series? She seems to believe that beefcake and sexual innuendo are the marks of a good show; I beg to differ. Sexual exploitation, whether of women or men, has no place on television. It may come across as harmless and fun but, when carried to an extreme, it can lead to the tragic headlines that have recently dominated the news. This is the 1990s, and shows like Lois & Clark, which base their premise on obsessive, adolescent sexual fantasy, have no place on TV.

Next, to imply, as Robbins does, that women aren't interested in special effects is sexist. This is a holdover of that old bugaboo that women aren't good in math or science. This innuendo is offensive to me and the legion of other women who are seaQuest and Star Trek TNT fans. Robbins would do well to check out the Nielsen ratings which show that, on any given week, the number of women watching seaQuest and Star Trek is significantly larger than the number who watch Lois & Clark.

So Lois & Clark is a relationship story, not a science-fiction series — fine. The problem remains that the writing is awful. To quote Tim Gallagher from CBG #1075, the stories are "insulting to the intelligence" and aimed for the "lowest common denominator" of the audience. Whether you look at Lois & Clark as a science-fiction or a relationship series, it just doesn't fly (pun intended).

Other than Robbins and Chuck Sutton, I know of no one who likes Lois & Clark. CBG's unqualified support of the series is disappointing. Perhaps you are too close to the Superman legend. You need to step back and take an objective look at seaQuest and Lois & Clark. Compare special effects, compare scripts and, most important, compare treatment of women. Tell me which series strives to challenge us with intelligent scripts and thought-provoking storylines and which series caters only to the viewer's baser instincts.

To state that the series is a "glorious success" or to believe it has any kind of significant following is to ignore the facts. Lois & Clark's ratings jump back and forth between marginal and very marginal. It was seaQuest that won a People's Choice Award as the best new drama this past season; Lois & Clark didn't even get nominated. ABC has confirmed it had decided to cancel Lois and Clark, but the series got a temporary 11th hour reprieve when it was put back on the schedule just hours before the network unveiled its fall lineup. ABC brass had second thoughts about the level of violence in the series set to replace Lois & Clark and whether the new series fit in with the "family entertainment network" theme ABC is promoting for its 1994-95 schedule.

The other potential new replacement series weren't ready to go, so ABC was forced to put Lois & Clark back on the schedule.

The heartening thing is that viewers 18-49 (men and women) have compared these two series and voted with their remote controls. seaQuest has beaten Lois & Clark among young viewers in every head-to-head competition to date. The margin of victory has varied but is steadily increasing. In May seaQuest scored its biggest victory to date over Lois & Clark among 18-49 and its third-biggest victory among men of the same age group. Lois & Clark's season finale came in last in its timeslot, while the seaQuest finale finished a respectable second. Quality does, indeed, win out.

[Hm. No place on TV for obsessive, adolescent sexual fantasy because it's sexual exploitation, which led to — what? O.J. Simpson? Some other headline?

The deletion of romantic banter — or interplay between the sexes — would make for little remaining programming, whether you're looking at TV of the '50s, '60s, '70s, '80s, or '90s. Of current programming, the claim that it was dealing with "obsessive, adolescent sexual fantasy" could be made of prime-time shows ranging from Murphy Brown to Seinfeld to The Simpsons to specific storylines in shows like NYPD Blue and Law & Order.

In short, isn't all this discussion getting a little heated and insulting, when what should be happening is people saying, "Hey, this is what I like about Show X. *If you like this sort of thing, I suggest you try it, too"? Strazewski looks for new 'Drone' publisher

By Gary St. Lawrence

Editor's note: CBG #1080 reported that repeated phone calls and faxes to Dagger Comics throughout the month of June had gone unanswered and that a number of freelancers for the publisher had reported similar results. By July 21, no member of the Dagger staff has responded to requests for information on its status.]

Len Strazewski's pitch for Drone described the title as "super-hero action, explosive graphics, and compelling characters . . . with the background of a believable yet fantastic universe."

Drone is an eight-foot robot created by an alien race to pilot space ships and explore dangerous planets. It is nearly indestructible, has tremendous physical strength, and can fire a multi-purpose beam of energy from a single optical sensor in its head. The robot has the ability to absorb and maintain any human or alien intelligence.

"It's unknown at this time whether or not he has his own personality," Strazewski said, "but when people encounter Drone, they don't know if it's his personality they're talking to or if it's that of someone or something Drone encountered previously."

As the story goes, Drone is stationed (or perhaps stranded) on Earth in the 1950s. Who built Drone? How old is it? Where did it come from? Why is it here? No one knows, and Strazewski said he wants to give the readers a lot to find out for themselves. There's more science-fiction to it than superheroing. Drone is about 75% science-fiction, with a super-hero "polish" to it.

"As conflict between super-humans rocks the world, a retired USAF officer, Coot Royce, makes a fateful decision to unleash hidden alien technology — at the cost of his own humanity," Strazewski said. "Drone is a wild card with unknown allegiances and a strange interplanetary history. Is Drone friend or foe? He may not even know himself."

Drone was all set to join the Dagger Comics line, and negotiations of the creator-owned project had reached the final stages, when Dagger stopped answering its phone.

"I was very concerned that this project, which I was developing for Dagger Enterprises, was going to get overlooked in the glut this summer. I am disappointed that Dagger was not able to continue with the project. Although it was created especially for Dagger, I know it can be reworked for another publisher."

Strazewski said he's uncertain how much reworking will be necessary to remove the background and premise of Drone from the already-established Dagger Universe. In its current state, Drone is a four-issue mini-series, with a continuous series planned, if a publisher can be found. Strazewski has six issues plotted.

Dagger Comics' Frank Griffith had said Drone had been in the works since October 1993, when he and Strazewski met at ComicFest in Philadelphia to discuss it and other projects.

"We got together again right before the Detroit Con and went over everything and we basically wrapped up the project there," Griffith had said. "Dagger had brought on a lot of Malibu people to help get the company jumpstarted. Len was one of them, and we're really grateful."

Drone is written and created by Strazewski. The first issues of Drone are pencilled by Scott Beaderstadt, who also painted the cover to the first issue.

Beaderstadt's pencil style on Drone is a departure from his Trollords work, with more of a "science-fiction noir look," as Strazewski put it. Beaderstadt is also working on a new Trollords story for an upcoming issue of Negative Burn from Caliber Press, with Trollords co-creator Paul Fricke, who also co-created Terror Tots with Strazewski.

Dagger had negotiated a distribution agreement for Drone with Wal-Mart, and Griffith had said negotiations had been "firm" with Target stores and Kmart for distribution, too. Strazewski said he foresees numerous opportunities for the marketing of toys, games and animation/theatrical development.

"Look at him," Strazewski said. "Drone's body design practically screams action figure."

Drone had been scheduled to ship in August from Dagger. But Strazewski said he's now unsure of when the project will be unveiled and he is openly courting publishers to pick up the series.

Starlin's 'Breed' is collected

Jim Starlin's 'Breed from Malibu Comics' Bravura line will be available in September in a softcover collection containing the complete first mini-series of 'Breed (#1-6).

'Breed, written and illustrated by Starlin, was the first comic book from Bravura, Malibu's new line of creator-owned comics.

'Breed will be three sets of six-issue mini-series that were originally planned as graphic novels. Starlin and his coloring studio, Electric Prism, will completely re-color — digitally remaster — the first four issues of 'Breed specifically for this collection. Electric Prism colored 'Breed #5 and 'Breed #6. 'Breed II #1, the first issue of the second series, will be solicited for release in October.

Starlin said, "I am extremely excited about this package. The first volume of 'Breed was conceptualized as a graphic novel, and now readers can experience it in this special format. The new colors are spectacular!"

In 'Breed, the town of Bucksnort, Texas, died in 1949. One person killed it. One woman survived, only to bear the murderer his only son. That child was adopted by Army Captain Alexander Stoner, the investigating officer. Stoner raised the child as his own, as a strict Catholic boy named after Alexander's own father — Raymond.

Years later Raymond discovers something strange about himself as a soldier in Laos during the Vietnam war. Surrounded by enemy soldiers, separated from his squad, and about to die, Raymond finds his demonic half. Maybe now the mystery of Bucksnort and the demise of 10 other towns just like it can be solved. Maybe the mysterious killers are just like Raymond: half demon, half human. Maybe they are all part of one 'Breed.

In addition to the complete first mini-series, the 'Breed collection will also include 'Breed sketchbook pages, development sketches, and an interview with Starlin. Malibu Comics will insert a "Hot Stamp" from the Bravura Gold Stamp Program into the 'Breed collection.

Bravura Line Editor Dan Danko said, "Starlin has created a best-selling title within the Bravura line. Now fans can have his first 'Breed mini-series in one volume."

Malibu's San Diego Casino Night is canceled

Malibu has announced "with deep regret" that the Casino Night scheduled during the San Diego Comic-Con has been cancelled. Company representatives said that a combination of new restrictions and regulations imposed by the city of San Diego forced the cancellation.

"Last year's Casino Night was a wonderful experience for all of us at Malibu, and we sincerely looked forward to making this year's event an even bigger and better evening," said Marketing Team Member John Riley. "It's a real shame. Ross Richie, Nikki O'Neil, and Andrew Cosby of Malibu all deserve credit for their efforts in coordinating everything from the entertainment to crowd control to the promotion. To see their efforts dashed is a real disappointment."

The executive decision was made due to the fact that the new restrictions and requirements would have created a party bearing no resemblance to the concept of Casino Night, and the new timetable would have ensured nothing but poor quality, because of the last-minute frantic scrambling that would have been inevitable.

Specific changes required included:

✷ The San Diego Comic Book Convention cannot act as co-sponsor with Malibu, leaving Malibu only 30 days to find another non-profit sponsor to join it in the event.

✷ The convention has been classified as a "swap meet," which means the general public can attend Casino Night, destroying the uniqueness that the event possessed last year, when only fans were admitted.

✷ No one under 18 will be allowed to gamble, even though no money is at stake, thus effectively preventing families and Malibu's fans from enjoying themselves.

✷ A number of additional permits from the San Diego Police Department would have had to be applied for. With a 30-day window, there was no guarantee that, once applied for, they would then be granted in time.

None of these exigencies were envisioned, when the planning and preparing of Casino Night began in January.

"If these problems had come to light sooner," said Riley, "Malibu could have come up with an alternate plan, one that would have met all the newly required conditions and still allowed a fun-filled interactive party that has come to be expected from us. But, as it is, there is just not enough time.

"Malibu does not create events, be they comic books or parties, purely for hype," Riley continued. "We pride ourselves on putting our best foot forward, mastering fate, and delivering substance behind our name. It's sad that bureaucratic red tape has to ruin such a great event, but to attempt to go on under these new conditions would ultimately prove unsatisfying, for us, our sponsors, and, of course, our fans. We'll still be having a great time at the booth all day — we just won't be able to carry it on past 6 p.m. Saturday night."

Malibu said it extends its sincere thanks to all sponsors and supporters involved in this event.

SkyBox begins second 'Star Trek' Master Series

SkyBox International has begun work on a second edition of SkyBox Master Series: Star Trek Edition Trading Cards. The new set, scheduled to release in late July will contain new art from Star Trek, Star Trek — The Next Generation, Star Trek: Deep Space Nine, and all six Star Trek feature films.

The 100 regular cards will feature a variety of techniques, including oil paintings by several artists, airbrush artwork, and digitally enhanced imagery. Showcased on the cards will be the characters, scenes, and spaceships that Star Trek fans have come to love since the original series began on television in 1966.

The 1994 edition of Star Trek Master Series will include features that have made SkyBox Master Series popular, such as the quality of art, full UV-coating, foil stamping, and a limited production quantity.

The card line will contain such subsets as Romantic Encounters, Alien Encounters, Galactic Encounters, a Star Trek: Deep Space Nine space station mural, and Worlds of the Federation. Brom, a painter best known for his work in the gaming industry, is creating three Arch Enemies paintings which will each form two-card puzzles.

There will be randomly packed bonus cards. Three painters are each creating a triptych for the series. (Each painting will form a three-card mural.) Joe Jusko, who painted the entire set of Marvel Masterpieces cards for SkyBox, is painting the crew from the original series; Boris Vallejo, who has painted Star Trek book covers, is painting the crew from Star Trek — The Next Generation; and Julie Bell, a former Conan cover artist, will paint the crew from Star Trek: Deep Space Nine.

On-pack offers will include a collector's album and four Proscenium Hologram cards. The holograms feature ship scenes in a "through the window" treatment.

SkyBox Master Series: 1994 Star Trek Edition Trading Cards will be sold in six-card packs and will carry a suggested retail price of $1.49.

SkyBox operates under an exclusive licensing agreement with Paramount Licensing Group to produce Star Trek trading cards.

A.P.E. '94 draws more than 1000

The first Alternative Press Expo (A.P.E. '94) was declared a huge success by its promoters, with more than 1000 (exhibitors and at-the-door admissions combined) in attendance.

A.P.E. '94 was billed as a one-day exhibit of small publishers, self-publishers, and alternative cartoonists and was held June 4 in San Jose, Calif.

"I was very pleased with the way things turned out," said A.P.E. promoter and Slave Labor Publisher Dan Vado. "Everyone seems happy and was asking me if there was going to be a next year before we even closed the doors on this year." While no date was set for a second A.P.E., he said the outcome of this year's event guaranteed at least one follow-up event in 1995.

The 1994 A.P.E. featured Dave Sim and Jeff Smith. There were more than 90 exhibits staffed by hundreds of self-publishers and cartoonists. Panels ran the gamut of subjects, from how to do a mini-comic to how to apply for a Xeric Grant.

"The beauty of the A.P.E. was that it allowed the small publishers and cartoonists to escape the shadow of the bigger, slicker publishers. A.P.E. was about us, and it put a very bright spotlight on alternative presses," Vado added.

For more information about the A.P.E. contact: Slave Labor Graphics, 979 S. Bascom Ave., San Jose, Calif. 95128 (408) 971-8929.

'Aardwolf' to begin in October

Aardwolf Publications will begin shipping in October with publications that include the work of Dave Cockrum, Gray Morrow, Robert Bloch, and Clifford Lawrence.

Publisher Bill Kaminaw said, "Our limited-edition comics are aimed at the intelligent reader. Aardwolf hopes to carve a new niche by blending fiction from today's upcoming science-fiction writers with illustrations from the comic-book industry's artists. Our comics will break from the convention of panel art and feature text alongside splash pages and spot illustrations. Each issue will feature a complete story by a different creative team."

Aardwolf #1 features "I, Gezeh," a dark look at the future after an intergalatic religious cult has accepted a false messiah. Written by Clifford Lawrence, the story has an afterword by horror/sf writer Robert Bloch. It will be illustrated by Dave Cockrum and will feature a painted cover by Gray Morrow.

Dave Cockrum is Aardwolf's creative director. The second issue of Aardwolf will feature art by Marie Severin.

Mancini dies

Composer Henry Mancini, who died June 14, held four Academy Awards for his movie music.

But the composition he always identified with most, he once said, was a theme he wrote for a character that became a popular animated star — "The Pink Panther."

Mancini, 70, died in Beverly Hills of liver and pancreatic cancer.

He composed music for more than 80 films and was nominated for Academy Awards 14 times. Some of his best-known works include "Moon River," "Days of Wine and Roses," "Charade," and the themes from such movies as Wait until Dark, The Great Waldo Pepper, and Victor-Victoria. He also composed the themes for such TV shows as Peter Gunn, Mr. Lucky, and The Thorn Birds mini-series.

Survivors include his wife, a son, two daughters, and three grandchildren.

The contract is worth more than $300,000, and Pacific will run three shifts five days a week for 20 days to meet delivery dates requested by Grupo Industrial Bimbo.

"We have been very active in the Mexican market, and this order is our first success. I expect more orders and continued business from Mexico," said Pacific President Michael J. Cramer.

Steven Keats dies

Movie, TV, and stage actor Steven Keats, who played Charles Bronson's son-in-law in the movie Death Wish, was found dead in his Manhattan apartment May 8.

His son, Thatcher Keats, said the actor, 48, had committed suicide. No details were given.

Keats made his Broadway debut in Oh! Calcutta, and his movie credits include the spaced-out punk in The Friends of Eddie Coyle (1974) and Robert Shaw's Israeli friend in Black Sunday (1977). His most recent movie appearance was in Woody Allen's Shadows and Fog.

Guests star in 'normalman-Megaton Man Special'

Jim Valentino and Don Simpson team up

By Jim Valentino

[Editor's note: The following article will appear in slightly different form on the inside back cover of normalman-Megaton Man Special #1.]

"Why aren't there more humor books?" everyone moans. The reason is simple: sales. Take normalman-Megaton Man Special, for example: a couple of prominent characters by two fairly high-profile artists with a bevy of top-seated guest stars.

Sounds like a formula for success, doesn't it? Yet total orders were just over 30,000. And, by independent publishing standards, that's a respectable showing! It's a shame, really.

Some things you do for money and some things you do for love. Again, case in point: this comic book.

In the mid-1980s, Don Simpson and I were rivals — both of us creating two popular parody titles that were in direct competition with each other — Megaton Man and normalman (respectively). My comic book was softer, more of an homage. Don's was biting. By 1986 both had run their natural course, and Don and I moved on to other projects. With the competition gone, we became friends and have remained so for years.

Flash forward to early '91, shortly after the formation of Image Comics. I got a call from long-time buddy (now Image Executive Director) Larry Marder. He told me that Fantagraphics Publisher Gary Groth had contacted Don about doing a scathing satire on the formation of Image and Don declined, citing his friendship with me personally and his admiration of what Image was trying to do professionally.

My reaction to the news was disappointment. I knew that Gary would go ahead and do his "scathing satire," probably with some far less talented kid (he did), and that Don's would, at the very least, be funny. So I walked down the hall and told the story to my then-studiomate, Rob Liefeld.

An aside here: You have to understand that Rob is an excitable guy. His natural-born enthusiasm gets increased proportionately to almost any idea thrown at him. When faced with a good idea, he becomes a virtual cyclone of creativity, tossing around ideas and concepts at such breakneck speed, a normal human could, in no way, keep up with him.

Rob went into cyclone mode!

We ran back down to my office and gave Don a call. This resulted in Splitting Image, a very funny satire on the formation of Image. Splitting Image led directly into Savage Dragon-Savage Megaton Man — and indirectly into normalman-Megaton Man.

I had vowed never to return to normalman once the series was done (a vow Rob had always told me I would break). But I missed the characters. The Savage Dragon-Megaton Man comic book really propelled me, and, that year at the San Diego Comic-Con (1992), I proposed to Don that we team our two characters up. I envisioned a huge story with walk-ons from almost every major independent cartoonist, a dimension-hopping extravaganza. One minute we'd be in Groo's world, the next minute, Bone's. We'd segue into a song and dance routine with Omaha and Neil the Horse.

FINALLY! SOMEBODY IN THIS STORY WHO'S DISPLAYING SOME COMMON SENSE!
WE BLAST OUR WAY OUT OF THIS REALITY WITH BLOODY FLAMES AND FIERCING POWER...
IT'S SO STUPID, IT JUST MIGHT WORK!!!
...AND INTO ALTERNITY!
STILL, IF ONLY WE HAD SOME SAGE GUIDANCE... TO, UH, GUIDE US!
JUST WHAT IS ALTERNITY, MR. SPOOK?
I THINK IT'S SORTA LIKE A PLACE WHERE EVERYTHING THAT IS ANYTHING THAT IS EVERYTHING ALL COMES TOGETHER AT THE SAME PLACE AND TIME, CAP.
WHAT'D HE SAY?
NEVER MIND! UP AHEAD IS THE LOBBY OF ALTERNITY!!

"We plotted the story out on a leisurely stroll through the Metropolitan Museum of Art (God knows what anyone walking behind us must have thought) and then returned to the hotel, where work began at a fever pitch."

Passing Bob Burden, I told him what we had in mind. He was in. Don brought in Larry Marder. We began to notify other cartoonists. My plan was to release the book to coincide with normalman's ninth anniversary. It seemed somehow appropriate.

But the idea collapsed under its own weight: too many hands and too much hassle. We decided to downscale.

In January '93, the four of us (Don, myself, Larry, and Bob) met in Texas at a couple of small conventions hosted by Larry Lankford. By day we signed autographs and did the usual convention stuff. By night, we held plotting sessions that never really got off the ground.

And the project seemed to collapse again.

Still, every time I talked to Don, the subject came up, and a year later, in January '94, I saw an opportunity for Don and me to get it together. I was in New York for a few weeks. I needed a change of venue, and New York seemed like the place. I invited Don up and we spent a weekend together. We plotted the story out on a leisurely stroll through the Metropolitan Museum of Art (God knows what anyone walking behind us must have thought) and then returned to the hotel, where work began at a fever pitch. For me, it was the creative release I'd been looking for for quite a while. I'm not sure what Don thought of it all. By weekend's end, we had half the comic book written and laid out with notes on the second half.

And, at long last, we were on our way.

We'd managed to find spots for nearly everyone we wanted. We'd managed to figure both The Flaming Carrot and Mr. Spook into the story, and we'd managed to take shots at the industry and almost everyone in it. Now, all that remained was the work.

I laid out the pages, roughing in every character that wasn't mine and suggesting dialogue. Don took the pages and lettered both of our characters (I don't letter), changing Megaton Man's dialogue as he saw fit and inking his own.

By Maggie Thompson

"The life of the journalist is poor, nasty, brutish and short. So is his style. You, who are so adept at the lovely polishing of every grave and lucent phrase, will realise the magnitude of the task which confronted me when I found, after spending ten years as a journalist, learning to say exactly what I meant in short sentences, that I must learn, if I was to achieve literature and favorable reviews, to write as though I were not quite sure about what I meant but was jolly well going to say something all the same in sentences as long as possible."

Stella Gibbons
Foreword to Cold Comfort Farm

Before I get to the listing of what has come into the office in the past week — and then on to actual comic-book reviews, I want to recommend some material for those readers who also want to become creators.

At Dragon*Con last weekend, a writer came up to me to continue a process he'd had with Don: getting suggestions on problem-solving in writing a mystery-adventure novel. I recommended one of the books Don and I both considered one of the best.

✸ Award-winning writer Lawrence Block is not only an outstanding novelist (his Matt Scudder books, especially When the Sacred Gin Mill Closes, being among Don's favorites), he is also a columnist for Writer's Digest. While Telling Lies for Fun and Profit (Arbor House, 1981, ISBN 0-87795-393-7) is my favorite, would-be fiction writers should also read Writing the Novel: From Plot to Print (Writer's Digest Books, 1979, ISBN 0-911654-67-4) and Spider, Spin Me a Web (Writer's Digest Books, 1988, ISBN 0-89879-326-2).

He comes up with varied and practical and even exciting ideas you probably won't come up with on your own.

For example, he suggests a beginning writer can learn a lot about storytelling by outlining the fiction he reads. Having read the story, you simply write down a summary of the plot, relating in a few sentences just what happens in the story.

For example:

. . . Narrator and his wife come home from vacation to find their house torn inside-out by burglars. Narrator goes off to work with his partner, complaining about what happened, the damage the burglars had done, the mess they made, etc. Turns out the two men are professional burglars on their way to knock off a warehouse themselves.

This method of outlining, of writing out plot summaries of what you have read, serves to pare away the writer's facility with prose and dialogue and characterization and reduce each story to its basic plot. In this fashion you can see after the fact just what it was that you've read. . . . the simple act of stripping the stories to the bones will give you an intuitive understanding of what holds them together that you could not readily obtain just by reading them.

Make your resubmission policy as automatic as you possibly can. Establish a hard and fast rule to get a manuscript back in the mail within twenty-four hours of its receipt. Better yet, send it out immediately — make it the first order of business to get that script off your desk and back in the mail.

In multiple-viewpoint novels, a frequent auctorial trick consists of calling your hero by his first name while calling other characters by their last names, even in scenes where they are the viewpoint characters. Robert Ludlum generally does this.

The books are highly structured, so it's not just a matter of trying to keep in mind an ever-growing list of tips. Moreover, if you've begun to try to write, you'll almost certainly find yourself with both fresh ideas and the energy to tackle them, if you let yourself be inspired by Block.

Highly, highly recommended, all three.

✸ When I returned to the CBG offices, I found waiting for me Getting into the Business of Comics, the other reason I got off on this kick of recommending how-to material. The paperback textbook is by Lurene Haines and is just out from Stabur Press ($12.95, 1994, ISBN 0-941613-60-7).

This is a really good buy. (Have you priced books recently? This is incredibly reasonable.) It is not only packed with Haines' advice, it also provides a spectrum of opinion from others in the industry.

Here's one sample (Malibu Editor-in-Chief Chris Ulm), a response to the question of whether a newcomer's approach makes a difference:

It absolutely makes a difference what kind of approach they use! The more professional their package of materials, the more seriously I tend to take people. A business card isn't always necessary, but a well written cover letter is, accompanying whatever samples are germane.

Here's a book with a suggested travel checklist ("razor (for those who shave — or should," "metallic and/or bleedproof pens for autographing"), a guide to licensed material, a sample of a form response, four chapters on approaching potential employers, even a sample day in the life of a comic-book editor (Archie Goodwin).

There are wise words for would-be self-publishers, too. For example:

Each month there are 500-600 titles offered to retailers. Marvel, DC Comics, Valiant, Image, Dark Horse and Malibu account for about 200 titles. This means you are competing with another 300-400 comics every month but retailers only spend 15-20% of their money on the more than 100 other smaller publishers. These include Topps, Caliber, Fantagraphics, Kitchen Sink, Millennium, Archie, Harvey Eclipse, Viz, and Revolutionary. That's a lot of scrambling for that 15-20%!

CBG Price Guide recently received two letters from well-meaning would-be pros who asked for advice on getting into the business. One wanted to know what paper and ink he should be using on his originals. The other figured he and his friends could put up $4000 and become publishers and wanted Malibu or Warp to handle his distribution. What these people eventually produce may be the next hot, entertaining comic book. But they've got a long way to go before they get into the field.

And they've got a lot of risks to take between here and there.

Haines' book can help minimize those risks.

She told me that there are about 25,000 copies of the book in print, with an additional printing in the works. Pick up a

(COMICS GUIDE, Page 28)

Then the pages went on to Bob and Larry, so they could ink, rewrite, and letter their characters. It was time-consuming, but it was the only way to ensure that the characters remained true to their original creative visions (something that's important to all of us). We then took the cover and pages 6, 12, and 13 to the 1994 WonderCon and passed them around for everyone who was in attendance to add their characters. For the folks who (foolishly) missed the con, we called them up and pasted their figures down.

The pages were sent to Gloria Vasquez for coloring and then to Rob Schwager to do his computer magic. I think they both did us proud! It was everything I'd hoped it would be. Maybe more. But, in the end, it is, as always, up to you, the reader, to decide whether all the hard work was worth it.

I should mention here that, if you're not reading the comics (most of which are self-published) put out by the creators involved in this project, you really owe it to yourself to check them out. They're unique visions that explore the parameters of this medium's potential, each and every one, and are some of the best comic books being published today.

But, if you're reading this, chances are good you already know that.

I'd like to thank Don, Larry, Bob, Gloria, and Rob for the outstanding job they all did on this project. I'd also like to thank all of our friends for donating their time and creative energy to adding the touch of class we thought it deserved. It may not have been a blockbuster seller, but it is a comic book done out of love. And that's what (I think) shows through.

And who knows?

Maybe, if enough of you request it, we'll do it again.

Don?

Don?

Somebody get the smelling salts. Don's passed out again.

✸ Here's a tip that's a sort of semi-review: Marvel will ship its Marvel Vintage Pack '94 in September. This product was primarily developed for listing in the JCPenney catalog — but it's available through comics shops, too, and was recently listed in Marvel's Sales to Astonish to let the direct-sales market know about it.

Young Men #25

It contains reprints of a number of offbeat Marvel titles, designed to stand on their own as a gift (with print runs probably much lower than any other editions of these issues). Contents are planned as follows:

Fantastic Four #66 and #67 (the Stan Lee-Jack Kirby "Him" story which introduced Warlock)
Avengers #88 and Hulk #140 (the Harlan Ellison-Roy Thomas "Emerald Atom" story)
Thor Annual #2 (featuring a 29-page Stan Lee-Jack Kirby story, along with two earlier Thor stories, one of which featured President Kennedy)
Spider-Man Annual #5 (complete with back-up features)
X-Men #62 and #63 (the "Savage Land" adventure in which Magneto was first seen without his helmet; art by Neal Adams)
Sgt. Fury and His Howling Commandos #13 (a 23-page Stan Lee-Jack Kirby Captain America story)
Captain America #109 (containing Cap's origin, as rendered by Jack Kirby and Syd Shores)
X-Men #28 (which introduced Banshee)
Tomb of Dracula #25 (this story by Marv Wolfman and Gene Colan featured the first appearance of Hannibal King)
Amazing Adult Fantasy #13 (with all stories by Stan Lee and Steve Ditko, and only three pages from this issue have been reprinted before)
Young Men #25 (from the little-known early '50s super-hero revival, featuring a never-before-reprinted Bill Everett Sub-Mariner story)
Sub-Mariner #8 (Namor battled The Thing in the story by Roy Thomas and John Buscema)

It should be terrific fun, a wonderful bunch of (as they say) Vintage Marvel. How can you pass up something that contains the panel shown here?

✸ Just in time to miss the listing above, here's Mortal Kombat #1 (Jul 94, $2.95, Malibu). They really didn't make this for me. I read (proofread, even) the cover story on this series and I still don't care about what's going on here.

This is designed for folks who play Mortal Kombat, and the story was set up so as to provide a plot involving the characters. That's a pretty tricky assignment, which seems to be carried out acceptably here, but I'm not the audience for this. Writer Charles Marshall, penciller Patrick Rolo, and inker Bobby Rae introduce the characters and the situation, and

LOOK! THERE IT IS!
FANTASTIC! IT WOULD MAKE AN IDEAL SETTING FOR A MOVIE!
LEGEND SAYS THAT IT DOESN'T REALLY EXIST IN THE SAME WORLD AS WE DO.
REALLY? WE ARE HERE!
Mortal Kombat #1

you might consider this as a gift for Mortal Kombat fans. If they (or you) like it, here it is.

(One warning: This book seems to be trying for a "G" rating, with discreet views of violence and with language which doesn't get more extreme than "cripes" — with one notable exception. Marshall and Editor Mark Paniccia are apparently under the illusion that the "f" word in panel 3 of page 6 is a euphemism. It's not.)

✸ StormQuest #1 is scheduled to ship in November, the first of a new line of color super-hero titles from Caliber Press. (News of the line will appear in a coming issue of CBG; the information came in too late to include in this issue.)

The title is created by Bob Hickey, written by Tom and Mary Bierbaum, and drawn by Greg Land, Willie Peppers, and Jerry Foley.

I have the first couple of issues of this monthly in photocopy form, and it's lightweight fun about an appealing family with some sort of special powers, not to mention a bunch of special-powered nasties of some sort.

As with many comics these days, it's a little difficult to know who's who and what's what; I'm beginning to yearn for one-character titles. But the art is nice, the good characters are appealing, the script is bright, and I really like the feeling of kids with parents. (Wise-acre superkids interacting with patient but exasperated parents seem to me to have been pioneered by Louise Simonson with the lamented Power Pack project. I miss the golden era of Power Pack, but it's still nice to see the set-up elsewhere — as in Defiant's The Good Guys, some of the X-stuff, and other projects that I can't think of at the moment but that readers will probably write in about.)

Superbabes — The Femforce Role-Playing Game. Selex Inc., 302 S. Center Street, Eustis, Fla. 32726. Suggested retail price: $17.50.

As you can guess from the name, this is an unusual role-playing game. For starters, this is only the second game I know of (the other being Macho Women with Guns) in which players are encouraged to roleplay female characters.

Superbabes is based on the FemForce characters published by Bill Black's AC Comics. It's a fairly easy game as far as character generation goes. Players are given 600 points to use in building a character. The primary stats cost two points for every one stat point, and powers and skills cost various points.

If you want, you can have your power based on a "gizmo," which can ease the point cost, depending on how obvious the gizmo is.

However, when you look at the names of the super-powers listed in the game book (whose cover doubles as a gamemaster's screen), you realize that the authors were playing it tongue in cheek. The names of several powers have been simplified (a less kind reviewer might say "dumbed down"). Teleportation is listed as "go places"; desolidification is "pass through things"; and telekinesis is "move things without touching them."

But the element which truly sets this game apart from others is the "BP." If a player wants his or her character to do something almost impossible with a power or move, he or she can choose to take a BP. Once this is done, the character's action succeeds. (No more than three BPs can be taken per game.) BP stands for — Bimbo Point!

The drawback of BPs is that, at the beginning of each subsequent game, the GM rolls a 20-sided die for each player. If the number rolled is less than the character's BP total, then the character experiences a BE — Bimbo Event. Bimbo Events are then determined by rolling percentile dice against a chart. Depending on what's rolled, your character can suffer an IRS audit, a bad hair day, a blind date, or simply have her costume destroyed in a public battle.

The main problem I've found with this game has been getting people to play it. The gamers who've played super-hero RPGs before have often never heard of FemForce. Most male gamers are reluctant to play a female character. (My method, if they stick around, is to explain that: While most gamers try playing characters they'd like to be, when you roleplay a member of the opposite sex, you're playing a character you'd like to be with.) Female gamers take one look at the name and walk away. (Although the one woman I persuaded to play the game so far said she enjoyed it.)

I did find the game to be genuinely fun. It's easy to hit an opponent and difficult to actually kill anyone. This is for gamers who want to roleplay in a world where everything isn't hack-and-slash all the time. That will also prejudice some gamers against it. But the rest, if they give the game a chance, will enjoy themselves.

Alfred Harvey dies

[Editor's Note: The information, photograph, and illustration were provided by Lorne-Harvey Publications Inc.]

Alfred Harvey, creator of Richie Rich, and founder and former owner and president of Harvey Comics, died at the age of 80 Monday, July 4, at New Rochelle Hospital. The cause of death was heart failure.

Alfred Harvey was born Alfred Harvey Wiernikoff on Oct. 6, 1913, the youngest son of Russian Jewish immigrants. He was raised in Brighton Beach, Brooklyn, N.Y. At 13, Harvey, a lifelong supporter of the Boy Scouts of America, became the youngest Eagle Scout in the United States. He won many Boy Scout rope tying competitions and also served as a lifeguard. As a young adult, Harvey became the Scoutmaster of Troop 101 in Brooklyn. To aid a deaf scout in communicating with the hearing world Harvey learned the entire deaf alphabet sign language.

He began his professional career after graduating from high school at the age of 15. During the Depression he supported his family by drawing advertising cartoons for $5, often completing two dozen or more a week.

In the late 1930s Harvey entered the world of comic-book publishing, then in its infancy. For a time, he was the managing editor of Fox Publications, whose characters included Blue Beetle.

In 1940 he decided to go into business for himself. Under the guidance of his mentor, the late Irving Manheimmer, owner of Publishers Distributing Company (PDC), Harvey began publishing his own line of Pocket Comics. Pocket Comics, which sold for a dime, were regular-sized comics cut and folded to half the standard size. This process offered readers 100 pages, almost twice the industry standard.

His earliest comic books featured his own, original characters, as well as a great deal of his own writing and drawing. His early creations included The Spirit of 76 (a red-white-and-blue-costumed hero) and The Black Cat. The Black Cat, a glamorous red-headed Hollywood starlet who donned a revealing leather cat suit to destroy villains through her mastery of judo, beat Wonder Woman to the newsstands by several months.

After a short period, Harvey's company gave up the pocket-sized format and began publishing comics in the standard size. At the same time, he acquired comic-book rights to many well-known characters of the day, beginning with The Green Hornet. Subsequently, Harvey published comic-book versions of Ham Fisher's Joe Palooka, Chic Young's Blondie, Milton Caniff's Terry and the Pirates, Chester Gould's Dick Tracy, Al Capp's Li'l Abner, Alfred Andriola's Kerry Drake, Bud Fisher's Mutt and Jeff, and Pat Sullivan's Felix the Cat, to name a few.

He often negotiated licensing arrangements for many of these artists, opening up a lucrative world for cartoonists. Harvey enjoyed the friendship of many of these cartoonists, particularly Fisher. Harvey, Fisher, and actor John Garfield often golfed together.

During World War II, Harvey enlisted in the U.S. Army, where he rose to the rank of Captain, Adjutant General's division. Stationed in Washington, D.C., at the Pentagon, Harvey produced educational comic books for the armed forces. The booklets used cartoons to teach illiterate soldiers how to read and, through the use of pictograms, how to operate military machinery.

Harvey enjoyed great prosperity in his business. Captain America creators Joe Simon and Jack Kirby joined Harvey's staff. The three had worked together previously at Fox. Harvey offered Simon and Kirby artistic freedom, and the pair produced some of their most artistically praised work during this period. Among their creations were Boy's Ranch, Stuntman, and (a few years later) Captain 3-D, one of many 3-D comics titles Harvey published during the early 1950s.

In 1949, Harvey began a long-time working relationship and friendship with George Baker, creator of Sad Sack. Harvey published as many as a dozen Sad Sack titles every month, and the character became a mainstay of the Harvey lineup. In 1958, Paramount Pictures produced The Sad Sack movie as a star vehicle for Jerry Lewis.

Baker was one of Alfred Harvey's closest friends and served as godfather to Alfred's son, Russel. Before his death in 1975, Baker sold his characters to Harvey's company. Sad Sack continues to be published by Harvey's family to this day.

Casper, the Friendly Ghost, Baby Huey, Herman and Katnip, Little Audrey, and Buzzy, the Funny Crow were animated cartoon characters produced by Famous Studios, a division of Paramount Pictures Corporation. In 1957, after publishing comic-book versions of these characters for several years, Harvey purchased the properties outright for his company. It was an innovative business deal, helped to fruition by Harvey's future wife, Elsa Victoria Lorne (known as Vicki), who was at the time his company's advertising director.

To raise enough capital to purchase the Famous Studios characters, Harvey concurrently leased the television rights to ABC and lined up the Mattel Toy Company as exclusive sponsor. The series, Funday Funnies, ran on Sunday evenings and was the first of several network and syndicated series and prime-time specials produced by Harvey. The company's logo, a multi-colored jack in the box who spelled out "Harveytoons" on an accordion, became one of the most recognizable imprints in the business.

Subsequent shows included: The New Casper Cartoon Show (which anchored ABC's Saturday morning children's programming throughout the '60s); Casper and Friends (a syndicated repackaging of the Funday Funnies programs which continues to this day); and, through a licensing arrangement with Hanna-Barbera in the 1980s, Richie Rich and Casper and the Angels.

Harvey created many of his company's best-loved characters and was constantly searching his mind for new ideas. He would rarely be found without paper and pen in hand and he doodled and played with word combinations endlessly. His creative output continued until he was hospitalized. Among his creations were: The Black Cat, The Red Blazer, The Spirit of '76, Richie Rich, Little Dot, Hot Stuff, Jackie Jokers, and Casper's girlfriend: Wendy, the Good Little Witch.

Blackbird 'weathers' its crisis

Although not as spectacular as the television coverage of towns along the Mississippi River, Blackbird Comics' home operations also suffered from last summer's torrential rains.

"We weren't sitting outside our house in a rowboat or anything," said Publisher John Nordland II, "but we did take on water. Our county was declared a disaster area."

The trouble started for Blackbird in late August 1993, when the sump pump keeping the below-ground printing operation dry failed, letting in water. "It's a frustrating thing to come home to, to say the least," Nordland said. "There was water everywhere."

Blackbird lost equipment, power, and a lot of paper to the water, including paper with printed jobs in progress.

Nordland said they didn't realize the extent of the damage at first. "It appeared minor. But we were too caught up in getting repairs, replacing the pump, and getting books to our printing clients in San Diego in time for at least the last of the big conventions to notice. We lost a lot more paper than we originally thought, and equipment had shorted out and was inoperable."

Blackbird had to make an emergency move to another location in another town to use other equipment temporarily until repairs could be completed.

After nearly three months at the temporary location, final repairs were made, replacement equipment was found, and Blackbird is currently back in its former location.

But the setback caused delays. Blackbird prints comics for other publishers, as well as its own titles, and Nordland said, "I had to concentrate on our printing customers' work and try to get caught up there before worrying about our own titles. And it takes twice as long to correct and replace sections from books as it does to just print them in the first place. We had sections of books destroyed and we found fliers stuck together by water into 2-foot-thick solid blocks: a little too thick to mail, but they would have made an impression."

Prior to the water damage, Blackbird's temporary seasonal help had left, two to college and the other to a career outside of printing, leaving Nordland and his wife, Gayle, to take the full load themselves. "The timing couldn't have been worse," Nordland said. "It was a real one-two punch and a huge financial hit, but we're starting to get above it now."

Blackbird received an assistance loan and, between that and insurance, has purchased new and better equipment to replace what was lost and damaged. "Ironically, we're in better shape now than we were before the water," Nordland said. "The new equipment is faster, and we have a better financial base. I just wish if hadn't taken so long to receive it. There were ridiculous delays due to paperwork and bureaucracy that kept us strapped much longer than necessary."

As a result of the delays Blackbird rearranged its publishing schedule, and all of Blackbird's titles are being re-solicited. Upcoming titles include: Jon Macy's Tropo; Open Range, a two-part look at growing up in the rural Midwest by Richie and Gina Prosch; and The Adventures of Chuck 'n' Pat, British humor and science fiction written by Darron Northall with illustrations by Charles Dougherty; Sound of Coming Darkness trade paperback by Bill D. Fountain; The Ups and Downs of a Spring-Heeled Jack (title may change before publication), a super-hero spoof trade paperback by Paul Birch and John Erasmus; Dervish Ropey, an "Indiana Jonesesque adventure coupled with British wit" trade paperback, also by Erasmus; the debut of Blackbird's trade journal Comics Plus International, featuring interviews and previews from the comics field with a cover by Martin E. Thomas; and the return of Nordland's own title Heroes.

Klaw leaves Blackbird Comics

For personal reasons Richard Klaw has resigned as managing editor of Blackbird Comics. The company said he had worked hard and contributed much to Blackbird and his assistance will be missed.

"We extend our best wishes to Richard and his wife, Shirley, and the best of luck in his continuing writing career," said Blackbird representatives.

Titles affected by the resignation include: Wings: Learning To Fly and Omnibus/Creature Features. Both titles are canceled.

No successor has been named, and all correspondence concerning Blackbird books, titles, or submissions under consideration should be addressed to John Nordland II, Blackbird Comics, 1202 Levison, Albert Lea, Minn. 56007 (507) 377-8980.

Blackbird is comics printer

Blackbird Comics has been publishing comics since 1985, but what many may not know is that it has also been printing comics since 1988.

Small publishers need affordable, high-quality printing in low print runs. Blackbird prints on offset paper, not on newsprint, and in print runs between 500 and 10,000.

Blackbird said it prints nothing but comic books and comics-related material and added that comics don't get "bumped" for other, "more lucrative" jobs. The company sends schedule faxes to clients so they know the status of their jobs and drop ships direct to distributors.

Blackbird added that it also produces high-quality, low-cost trade paperback printing. For more information, write Blackbird at 1202 Levison St., Albert Lea, Minn. 56007, or leave a message on the phone/fax (507) 377-8980.

Rafferty, an assassin of Ultras, makes his first appearance in Firearm #12. The Malibu Ultraverse title is scheduled to ship in August.

X-Men rings and Marvel phone cards are sold out from the manufacturer.

SkyBox says Wal-Mart line is test

Since the middle of May, parents and kids who have stood in line at Wal-Mart stores throughout the nation may have noticed packs of DC Stars Trading Cards at check-out counters.

SkyBox said that its arrangement with ANCO, which distributes products exclusively to Wal-Mart, is "an effort to expand the customer base of all retailers that carry comic-book collectibles." Wal-Mart stores throughout the U.S. are carrying DC Stars Trading Cards in their check-out lines.

"We've developed DC Stars Trading Cards exclusively for Wal-Mart stores," said Vice President of Marketing Scott McCauley. "With a retail price of 99¢ a pack, this product offers the kind of impulse purchase that we hope will get people involved in card collecting. Then they'll start showing up in comic-book specialty stores to find more trading cards and the comics that inspired them."

The 54-card set, which features favorite characters of the DC Universe, is different from sets released to the hobby in that it consists of previously published art. ANCO may produce as many sets of DC Stars cards as demand warrants. That means production is unlimited, and the set is not considered as collectible as other, more limited card sets from SkyBox.

"We're putting some cards out there to see how Wal-Mart customers react to them," said McCauley. "It's more of a children's product than anything else."

The set includes 45 character cards, as well as nine picture-forming puzzle cards, one of which is in every pack. Four foil cards are randomly inserted in the packs.

The display box for DC Stars is an unusual size compared to other boxes from SkyBox. The long and thin box, which contains 100 packs of cards, is designed to maximize consumer focus in a check-out line.

SkyBox produces DC Stars Trading Cards under an exclusive licensing agreement with DC Comics and Warner Bros. Consumer Products.

HARVEY

In the 1970s and 1980s, Richie Rich was a popular comic-book character. The blond boy, always dressed in the same Fauntleroy-style outfit, set a record by appearing in 36 comic book titles every two months. These titles, invariably dreamed up by Harvey, included: Richie Rich Million$, Richie Rich Billion$, Richie Rich Zillion$, Rich Rich Dollar$ and Cent$, Richie Rich Fortune$, Rich Rich Gold and $ilver, and Richie Rich and His Dog, Dollar (the world's only "dollarmation," whose spots were dollar signs).

Harvey had a flair for marketing and licensing and leased his characters to more than a thousand products. Under Harvey's guidance, Casper became the spokesghost for Sea and Ski tanning lotion, Hi-C, Hostess, and Ralston Super Sugar Chex breakfast cereal, to name a few. Casper's line of toys were produced by Mattel, Schapper, Milton Bradley, Collegeville Costumes, Viewmaster, Peter Pan Records, and many others. In 1976, Casper, Wendy, and Richie Rich appeared in a comic book commemorating the National Baseball League's Centennial. Harvey's comic books and cartoons have appeared worldwide in dozens of languages and countries.

Harvey was most proud of his public-service work, lending his characters and publishing expertise to a wide variety of worthy causes. These included War Victory Bonds, The Boy Scouts of America, The Camp Fire Blue Birds, the U.S. Armed Forces, voter registration, the American Dental Association, and the fight against drug abuse. Casper was an official Goodwill Ambassador for UNICEF and was the nickname and mascot of the Apollo 16 command module.

In 1989, Harvey sold most of his cartoon properties to a group of California investors headed by Jeffrey A. Montgomery. Harvey retained the rights to several of his earlier characters, including The Black Cat and The Sad Sack, and his family continues to publish these characters through Lorne-Harvey Publications. A Black Cat motion picture is in pre-production.

Alfred Harvey had lived in Larchmont, N.Y., with his wife and children since 1968. His wife, Vicki, passed away March 15 of this year, but he is is survived by four sons: Alan, president of Lorne-Harvey Publications of Larchmont; Russel, a cartoonist, living in New York City; Adam of Mamaroneck, N.Y., and Eric of Larchmont. He is also survived by a daughter from a previous marriage, Dr. Shulamis Bush; a son-in-law, Prof. Boruch Bush; two grandchildren, Chavah and Dovid; and a step-granddaughter, Sarah, all of Brooklyn.

Funeral services were held Tuesday, July 5, at Larchmont Temple. In lieu of flowers, the family suggests a gift to charity, a good deed, or an act of friendship.

Gil Elvgren pin-ups cards offer nostalgia

Soda shops, sock hops, drive-in movies, bobby socks, poodle skirts, and letter-men's sweaters. The American 1940s and '50s had a quality of innocence and charm about them that's hard to forget. So did the work of famed artists of the time, such as pin-up artist Gil Elvgren. Comic Images takes a nostalgic look at Elvgren's calendar girls with Calendar Pinups 2 Collector Cards, an October sequel to last summer's Gil Elvgren's Calendar Pinups Collector Cards.

Elvgren was born in 1914 in America's heartland: the Midwest. He studied at the American Academy of Fine Art in Chicago in the 1930s, where he found a mentor and inspiration in teacher and artist Haddon Sundblom. Sundblom was an American illustrator at the turn of the century who, like Elvgren, painted beautiful women to sell everything from Coca-Cola to Clorox.

After leaving the Academy, Elvgren began his career with Louis F. Dow. But it was for Brown & Bigelow, the country's foremost advertising and calendar company, that Elvgren created his best-known and best-loved work. Elvgren's leggy, perky girls-next-door soon graced billboards, calendars, magazines, blotters, and playing cards across America. His career spanned four decades, as Elvgren painted professionally until his retirement in the early 1960s. Elvgren died in 1980, leaving behind an artistic legacy of beauty and a window to America's "glory days."

In Gil Elvgren's Calendar Pinups 2 Collector Cards (10 cards per pack — 12/48 count), Comic Images passes on Elvgren's legacy — and opens his window to the past — to fans and collectors. The series, printed on coated stock, will feature 90 of Elvgren's ingenues in a full-color, full-bleed card-front format. The full-color card backs feature comments and insights on the artist and his work from one of Elvgren's closest friends and associates. The series will be available in October through comic-book and hobby specialty shops nationwide.

Randomly inserted Comic Images' bonuses include:

Six Omnichro cards (Comic Images' newest opulent, pearlized chase card) randomly inserted in the card run; "Soft & Cuddly" (a three-card subset) randomly inserted in packs at the rate of one card per box; a limited-edition Medallion card ("uniquely designed and numbered, with a certificate of authenticity on the card back") appearing in packs at the rate of four per case; miniature press sheets (printed in full color, front and back, and measuring approximately 5×7") randomly inserted in display boxes; and one uncut sheet of six special cards not appearing within the series will be included in each case.

Kitchen Sink Press: The First 25 Years, a trade paperback by Dave Schreiner, is scheduled for release in August from Kitchen Sink Press. The 112-page book traces the company's history year by year and includes photos, illustrations, and commentary from Alan Moore, Mark Schultz, and Will Eisner, among others.

THE LAW is a ASS

WHITING

By Bob Ingersoll

This column's title comes from Charles Dickens' Oliver Twist, in which Mr. Bumble, a vulgar, common, and ungrammatical man, told that he was liable for the actions of his wife (because English law at that time presumed that a man was responsible for the acts of his wife), responded: "If the law supposes that . . . the law is a ass — a idiot . . . The law is a bachelor." An ass is a donkey.

The author of this column can be reached at P.O. Box 24314, Lyndhurst, Ohio 44124.

Parodies, not to be impolitically incorrect about it, are not a bra size. Rather, according to Webster's New Twentieth Century Dictionary, Unabridged, they are "literary or musical composition(s) imitating the characteristic style of some other work or of a writer or composer but treating a serious subject in a nonsensical manner in an attempt at humor or ridicule."

They are also the occasional subject of lawsuits.

That's where I come in.

I have a badge — of course, a badge that doesn't do me any particular good when I come to write this column.

Fortunately, I also have a law degree.

It probably shouldn't come as a surprise to you that it is one such parody suit that I want to talk about today. Specifically, I want to discuss the suit of Campbell v. Acuff-Rose Music Inc., U.S., 114 S.Ct. 1164 (1994) or — to put it into terms not steeped in the arcane code we lawyers use to hide case names, so that only we know where to find legal precedents and you have to hire us to do that for you — the suit where Acuff-Rose, the copyright holder of the Roy Orbison song "Oh, Pretty Woman," sued 2 Live Crew and Luther Campbell over its parody song "Pretty Woman," claiming the latter song infringed on the former's copyright.

While it is true that this suit dealt with a song parody, it is also true that between Mad and numerous other comic-book parodies published, parody is active in our field. (Would I lie to you?) (OK, but I'm not lying to you this time!) So, as the general principles of law set forth in Campbell apply as much to comic-book parodies as they do to musical parodies, I wanted to set forth the said principles for the use of those who do comic-book parodies.

Let's start at the very beginning — it was, after all, good enough for Julie Andrews.

In 1986 Roy Orbison and William wrote the rock ballad "Oh, Pretty Woman." You might remember it; it made the rounds, had a good beat, and Julia Roberts certainly danced to it.

In 1989, the rap group 2 Live Crew sought permission from Acuff-Rose Music Inc. to do a parody rap song called "Pretty Woman." 2 Live Crew assured Acuff-Rose it would afford all credit for ownership and authorship of the song to Acuff-Rose and would pay a fee for their use.

Acuff-Rose, perhaps fearing that the one of the most controversial music acts of the time and one known for its raunchy lyrics would not do justice to the classic musical ballad that was "Oh, Pretty Woman," refused permission. So 2 Live Crew did the song anyway, producing a song that started with the same distinctive bass riff as the original and the same first line but with different and raunchy lyrics.

Acuff-Rose sued for copyright infringement and lost the trial, when the trial court ruled a parody fell into the "fair use" exception to the 1976 Copyright Act and granted a summary judgement for 2 Live Crew. (A summary judgment is not a critical evaluation of Cliff Notes. Rather, it is a ruling by the trial court that no material issue of fact exists and that the entire case can be decided solely on question of law, so that the judge can decide the case without sending it to the jury. Here the trial court ruled that, as a matter of law, "Pretty Woman" fell under the fair use and was not actionable.)

Acuff-Rose appealed and won, when the Court of Appeals ruled that the commercial nature of the parody rendered it presumptively unfair and that by taking the "heart" of the original song, 2 Live Crew had taken too much of the original. So "Pretty Woman" was not properly fair use. Making it, I guess, unfair abuse and actionable.

Acuff-Rose's victory was short-lived, however. 2 Live Crew appealed to the Supreme Court of the United States, and it, in a unanimous decision, reversed the Court of Appeals.

(And you began to see how it is that legal bills get so high. Because, if you think that the lawyers for either side did all that litigating for free and gratis, you're showing more naiveté than 2 Live Crew showed in believing Acuff-Rose would jump at the chance of having one of the most controversial music acts of the time do a raunchy send-up of one of its more successful songs.)

The Supreme Court noted that, if 2 Live Crew's "Pretty Woman" did not fall under fair use, it would clearly be copyright infringement, given that the song used the exact melody of "Oh, Pretty Woman." So it had to determine whether parodies could be considered fair use under the 1976 Copyright Act.

The court held that the test for whether a derivative work fell under fair use is fourfold. (What, you were expecting something easy from the legal profession? Didn't I already talk to you about that naiveté problem of yours?)

First, the courts have to examine the purpose and character of the use: Was it commercial or was it more critical or educational? If it was the latter, it would more likely fall under fair use.

Second, the courts have to examine the nature of the copyrighted work, as some works are closer to the core of intended protection than others and, thus, more deserving of strict copyright protection.

Third, courts have to examine the amount and substantiality of the portion used in relation to the copyrighted work as a whole. (In other words, how much of the copyrighted work did the derivative work use and did that use take so much of the "heart" of the copyrighted work that its value was substantially diminished?)

Fourth, courts must examine the effect derivative work has on the potential market value of the copyrighted work.

When the Supreme Court applied those four tests to the song "Pretty Woman," it went like this: Although "Pretty Woman" 's intended use was commercial (intent of the derivative work), that alone was not dispositive. Parodies create what the Court called "transformative works," works that shed light on earlier works and, in the process, create new works. Moreover, said transformative works can further the creativity-promoting goals of the Copyright Act. So the fact that the parody is also intended for commercial use does not, by itself, doom the parody. When a parodic character may be reasonably perceived, even if said parody is in bad taste, the protection of the fair use doctrine can come into effect.

Moreover, as the intent of "Oh, Pretty Woman" was also commercial (the second prong), the intent prongs were kind of a wash. (OK, the Supreme Court didn't really say "kind of a wash." I thought I'd clean up some of the legalistic obfuscation in the opinion for you. That way I'd save you the effort I had to go through finding someone who would clean it up for me.)

"Pretty Woman" did use parts of "Oh, Pretty Woman" (specifically the opening bass riff, the first line, and the actual melody). But parodies, according to the Supreme Court's analysis of the third prong, must use enough of the source material to make said source recognizable to the audience to be effective, for it is only comparing the original to the parody that the parody has any comedic effect. So the fact that "Pretty Woman" used the opening bass riff, first line, and basic melody of "Oh, Pretty Woman" as a means of conjuring up the source material being parodied did not mean it was copyright infringement. In addition, "Pretty Woman" also changed the words significantly and added "scraper" noise and altered the drum beats, so it didn't make more use of "Oh, Pretty Woman" than was necessary to conjure up the original for its audience.

The Supreme Court noted in its application of the fourth prong that for the most part parodies do not have any significant adverse affect on the source material in the marketplace, so the fourth prong did not apply. In addition, even if a scathing parody kills demand for the original, that is really no different than when a scathing review kills the demand for a work of art. The court was not prepared to recognize such a harm as being actionable under the Copyright Law.

The upshot of Campbell v. Acuff-Rose was the Supreme Curt ruled parodies can fall under fair use, as it is defined by the Copyright Act of 1976, and can be protected from copyright infringement suits. However, the court did not rule that "Pretty Woman" definitely was a parody that fell under the protection of fair use. Instead, it noted that neither 2 Live Crew nor Acuff-Rose introduced any evidence on the question of whether "Pretty Woman" actually had adverse market-value effect on "Oh, Pretty Woman." For that reason, the Supreme Court held the trial court erred when it ruled there was no issue of fact before it, as the question of marketplace harm was a question of fact. The Supreme Court remanded the case for further proceedings on that question to assist in the process of determining whether "Pretty Woman" infringed on the copyright of "Oh, Pretty Woman."

And stop looking at me like that. You were expecting a nice, clear-cut decision that spelled easy victory for one side without the need of having to go back to trial, thereby creating more litigation and more lawyers' fees? I keep talking to you about that naiveté problem of yours. Next you'll be telling me you don't know about the Easter Bunny.

Bob Ingersoll (P.O. Box 24314, Lyndhurst, Ohio 44124), public defender, comic-book fan, rap music tolerator, and legal analyst for Comics Buyer's Guide wants to know why Tony Isabella is looking at him and saying, "What about the Easter Bunny?"

MORE SERVICES FOR YOUR SUCCESS

The Herd made its annual drive to the Chicago Comicon on the last day of June. The Herd, as seasoned readers of Tony's Tips will recall, is an organization whose very membership is crouched in dark secrecy. At least until we get our new T-shirts.

Our annual drive was just that. Bob Ingersoll, Roger Price, and Thom Zahler climbed into my new Ford Aerostar van and we were off to "that toddling town."

The van represents my acceptance of my advanced age. At 16, I wanted a sports car.

"Wait'll the chicks see this! It's a Babemobile!"

At 32, I wanted a sports car.

"I am not having a mid-life crisis!"

At 42, I wanted this van.

"Look at this baby! I can hold the kids and the groceries! The other moms are going to be green with envy!"

Okay, so I'm still working through the gender confusion. If I make it through seven more therapy sessions, I get the toaster. Do you want to hear about Comicon or not?

Here's the short version:

This year's Chicago Comicon was one of the best and best-run conventions I've ever attended. The display and event areas were laid out to facilitate easy movement. The fans were pleasant and polite. The pros were accommodating and friendly. It was just a big warm fuzzy hug of a convention.

My convention started with Harlan Ellison complimenting this column. No, wait. This isn't self-serving name-dropping. Well, not just self-serving name-dropping. It actually leads into an amusing convention story.

A while back, Peter David used his CBG column to challenge a spurious coterie calling itself "Enemies of Ellison." This group later changed its name to "Victims of Ellison" in a truly pitiful attempt at spin control. By any name, you shall know them by the trail of slime they leave behind them as they scurry into corners dark and cold.

David responded by founding "Friends of Ellison." To become a member of this august assembly, all one had to do was relate an act of kindness performed by Ellison. Not only would the members contribute to a more accurate record of Ellison's character, they would receive a spiffy-keen button denoting their membership in said association.

I don't have one of these buttons. Yet.

You see, as much as I applauded David's efforts, I felt that responding to the "enemies" would grant them the recognition they so obviously, pathetically desired. Ignore them and consign them to the void whence they scuttled.

At 42, occasional spurts of maturity are to be expected.

Scene shift. Ingersoll, wearing his "FOE" button, and I are in a hotel elevator. It stops. Two fans enter. Both wear "FOE" buttons. I'm the only person in this car not wearing one. Three heads turn and stare at me. Uh-oh.

I feel like I'm in a road company of West Side Story. I'm a Jet and this is Shark turf. I panic.

"I'm a friend of Harlan's, too," I sputter. "I've been over to his house and everything! He's fed me! Please don't kill me! I'll get a damn button!"

They let me live. I've sent my Harlan story to David and am anxiously awaiting my own "FOE" button. Don't leave home without it. Really.

Other convention tidbits:

With its multi-media "Wayne's World," nicknamed for the poor, mad genius who conceived it, DC Comics is still the leader in the convention booth war. Who among us was not touched by the sight of Bob Wayne, DC's Director of Direct Market Sales, standing high atop this majestic structure, crushed biplane in his hand, facing down all who would challenge his dominance? Wayne's been working way too hard lately.

Big Entertainment's Tekno•Comix display was also a cool piece of work with its gigantic steely fist thrusting towards the skies, its virtual reality games, terrific freebies, and its most amazing attraction: writer Mickey Spillane. It was a real thrill to meet a guy who looks every bit as tough as his own hard-boiled creations.

Tekno•Comix has scheduled Spillane's Mike Danger for 1995. The series is written by Max Allan Collins with art by Keith Giffen and Mike Barreiro. Danger is an avenging, no-nonsense detective from the 1950s, transported into the 21st Century. Am I excited? Hey, who do I have to work over to get an advance copy?

A few columns back, I encouraged Tips readers to come over and say, "Hi," if they saw me at this convention. To my enormous delight many of you did just that.

Tekno•Comix founders Mitchell Rubenstein and Laurie Silvers with Mike Danger creator Mickey Spillane and writer Max Allan Collins at the 1994 Chicago Comicon.

Your timing was often superb. Within minutes of my arriving at the CBG booth one morning, and within hearing of CBG Publisher Greg Loescher, two readers inquired when my best columns would be collected in book form. What an excellent question!

Similar feats of synchronicity were also executed in front of other persons — editors, publishers, talent scouts — who could move me into a higher tax bracket with the merest wave of a checkbook. Is it any wonder I love my readers?

Several of you, including John Davis of Capital City Distribution, commended the "Surviving the Summer" columns. I was glad to receive such approval for installments that went so far afield of my usual lighthearted fare. In answer to the question asked more than once, any distributors who wish to reprint those columns for their accounts have my express permission to do so. Just send me a copy for my files. [Editor's Note: Contact Maggie Thompson for the OK from CBG.]

Rob Liefield's Extreme Studios was responsible for one of my most jarring con moments: seeing Maggie Thompson and Ingersoll at the helm of the Youngblood ship. Our CBG editor looked perfectly natural at the controls. The albino wonder looked like something out of a Gerry Anderson show.

Historical regression: Anderson was the creator/producer of a number of television programs starring puppets: Fireball XL-5, Supercar, Thunderbirds. Then he moved on to shows starring real human beings. Sort of. Check out his Space: 1999 or UFO. Every actor is a ringer for one of Anderson's puppet heroes. Don't ask me why. I'm still dealing with my own neurosis.

I didn't get to spend much time in the dealers' area but was impressed by the extraordinary variety of comic books and related items being displayed. If I ever reach that higher tax bracket I mentioned earlier, you should definitely avoid getting between me and all those goodies.

I did buy a copy of Lois Lane #41 (May 1963) at the show, a guilty pleasure, if ever there was one. It cover-features a weird tale called "Superman's Romance with Lana Lane," in which the Man of Steel's main squeezes — Lois and Lana Lang — are joined into one person. I read this comic book when it first came out but, as a good Catholic lad of 12, never understood just how kinky a concept this was. The story was graced by some hotter-than-usual artwork by Curt Swan and George Klein and written by Superman co-creator Jerry Siegel. I love this stuff!

The convention provided a large room for artists and smaller publishers, which allowed me the opportunity to catch up with old friends and make some new ones.

Terry Beatty showed me the glitzy Mitch O'Connell cover that crowns Johnny Dynamite #1, the first of a four-issue mini-series. I praised this Collins/Beatty stroll on the strange side way back in CBG #1072 (June 3), giving it my highest recommendation. It ships from Dark Horse Comics in September, so now would be one heck of a good time to ask your friendly neighborhood retailer to order a copy for you.

The small-press corps was out in force at the con and filled my eager hands with their latest efforts.

Matt Feazell, the Isabella-anointed "king of the small-press comics," gave me his Board of Superheros #1 (50¢). He loses some points for misspelling "superheroes" but wins most of them back with his sharply humorous tale of costumed corporate wage slaves. If you'd like a catalog of Feazell comics, send a SASE to him at: Not Available Comics, 3867 Bristow, Detroit, Mich. 48212.

Pam Bliss is the "queen of the small-

TV sequels, remakes move to big screen

By Jim Neal

Mel Gibson already has starred in a series of three movies. Now he may add another series.

A sequel is planned to his successful Maverick western that opened this summer. In that one, he co-starred with Jodie Foster and James Garner. Garner had been the star of the popular Maverick series on TV in the late 1950s and early '60s.

Gibson's previous movie series was the Mad Max trilogy made in Australia and enormously popular in the United States. They were Mad Max (1979); Mad Max 2 [retitled in the United States as The Road Warrior (1981)]; and Mad Max beyond Thunderdome (1985).

But Max won't be the only subject of a follow-up movie. At least three more are planned in Hollywood's Sequel City, with many movies on tap from more TV shows along Remake Row.

The other sequels are for Dennis the Menace (which also opened last year and starred Walter Matthau as grumpy Mr. Wilson) and The Fugitive (the headline-grabbing suspense film that starred Harrison Ford).

Dennis was based on Hank Ketcham's daily single-panel newspaper cartoon and Sunday color comic strip; a late 1950s-early '60s TV series starred Jay North in the title role. The Fugitive was based on a popular suspense series that ran on TV between 1963 and 1967 and starred the late David Janssen.

Dennis won't be the only comics-related movie planned for the future. Three films, including Demon Knight and Dead Calm, are to be released under the overall title of Tales from the Crypt. The title of the third movie planned has not been announced.

Tales from the Crypt is from a TV network anthology of horror programs based on the EC comic book. An earlier movie under the Tales from the Crypt title was released in the United Kingdom in 1972 and starred Sir Ralph Richardson, Peter Cushing, and Joan Collins. It consisted of five short horror movies strung together.

Barney the dinosaur, Jonny Quest, and The Mighty Morphin Power Rangers aren't exactly comic-book creations but they all either are or were popular TV shows and will become big-screen movies.

Barney: The Movie is to be produced by Warner Bros.

The Mighty Morphin Power Rangers may be the first of a series. Fox plans to release this film close to Easter 1995.

Jonny Quest started as a Saturday-morning animated TV show and then spent a season as a prime-time series. The animated show — comics artist Doug Wildey was the creator, designer, director, and producer — ran in the middle '60s on TV.

A feature film is planned for release, perhaps in 1995. An earlier full-length animated movie was made for TV in 1993.

Look for a new Star Trek movie, too. Plans are to call this one Star Trek: Generations, and it will bring stars from the original TV series together with stars of Star Trek: The Next Generation, which just finished a seven-year run. Plans are for the movie's principal stars to be William Shatner and Patrick Stewart.

Something for TV's Mystery! fans will either make them look forward with anticipation or revulsion. The anticipation will come from a theatrical movie based on the Prime Suspect shows. The "how could they do that?" reaction is from the fact that the TV series' star, Helen Mirren, was passed over to play the central character, Scotland Yard Detective Inspector Jane Tennison.

Madeline is a movie that will be made from another animated TV series aimed at kids; that series, in turn, was based on the Ludwig Bemelmans series of children's books. Tri-Star will produce the movie from a script by Marsha Norman, who won a Pulitzer Prize for her drama " 'night, Mother."

And three more films are planned from that TV series catchall category, the "situation comedy." These are The Brady Bunch Movie, Father Knows Best, and Green Acres.

The Brady Bunch, starring Robert Reed, Florence Henderson, and Ann B. Davis, ran from September 1969 through August 1974 and was a predictable comedy about a family with a passel of well-scrubbed kids. The new Paramount movie is to be directed by Betty Thomas, who played Officer Lucy Bates on Hill Street Blues.

Father Knows Best was a show — mostly a comedy — about a much smaller family. Stars were Robert Young, Jane Wyatt, Elinor Donahue, Billy Gray, and Lauren Chapin. This show ran from Oct. 3, 1954, to April 5, 1963. The script for the movie version is being written for Universal by Pulitzer Prize-winning novelist Larry McMurtry and his writing partner Diana Ossana.

Green Acres presented Eddie Albert and Eva Gabor as a city-bred couple trying to live on a rural farm — a cruddy, run-down rural farm. Production will start when a script is completed by comedian Rita Rudner and her husband, Martin Bergman.

Preserving plastic memories in a vinyl age

By Mark Pedersen
Dark Horse Marketing Assistant

Models have always played an important part in growing up for many children. How could you forget that first model kit your father or mother bought at the five and dime? Whether it was a car, a truck, a tank, or a boat, that was a monumental day in your childhood. It established that you had graduated to the next level in your development; you were a step above toys but one step below taking dad's watch apart. For that matter, they (your parents) probably bought you your first model kit to keep you from tearing apart various small appliances around the house; they had to find something to keep those small hands busy.

As you grew older, you might have obtained different kinds of kits: not just any run-of-the-mill kind of plastic activity set, but the latest, hottest, grooviest kit around — that new glow-in-the-dark Aurora monster model. Ahhh, the good old days — the memories all come flooding back. Believe it or not, those good old days are upon us again, but these kits are a little different.

Today's model kits are more involved, more detailed, and are made from different materials than those plastic styrene kits of the past. Plastic has given way to vinyl, resin, and Cold-Cast porcelain.

Dark Horse Director of Product Development Randy Bowen said, "I feel that Dark Horse Comics is spearheading the hobby into new directions." The company said that this small ("soon to be large") branch is just setting into motion "the machinery that could make it the largest fantasy figure model producer since Aurora."

In summer 1991 Dark Horse Comics produced its first figure of a new model line, Paul Chadwick's comic-book character Concrete in Cold-Cast porcelain. It was an immediate success, with the limited-edition 500 figures selling out in just under a month. "The Concrete figure was my first comics-related sculpture. After its initial success, my interest was piqued, and I wanted to do more (in the comics field)," Bowen said. "The comic-book market and the model market are tailor-made for each other. They kind of dovetail into one another, as they combine the heroic elements and the monster elements into one. A new model kit is like discovering that new comic book: It makes you feel the hobby is worthwhile."

With the success of the Concrete figure, Bowen was brought on board full-time to help develop the growing potential of this re-emerging hobby. When asked about the Cold-Cast porcelain process (a discovery of Bowen's), he said, "It involves putting a secret ingredient into porcelain so that you don't have to fire it; it sets on its own, hence Cold-Cast."

The second Cold-Cast kit produced was an Alien warrior sculpted by Bowen. This kit proved to be an even bigger success than Concrete. With a total of 1000 kits produced, 800 sold immediately, with the other 200 going fast. Set for release in mid-December is the company's first foray into vinyl production — a King Kong model figure kit. Dark Horse Comics Creative Director Randy Stradley said, "The first kit is always a challenge to produce, and we are learning the 'ropes' about overseas production."

Other kits set for future release involve the first in a line of Universal Monster Cold-Cast kits featuring Frankenstein's Monster; The Mask Cold-Cast kit, including various weapons (cream pie not withstanding); and three separate Predator 2 vinyl kits, consisting of three figures that have interlocking bases, so you can buy one for that "solo warrior against the universe feel" or purchase all three and have your own Predator army.

Stradley said, "Our model division is in its infancy at this point. We have big plans for the future, as well as high hopes." The decision to produce a kit is a collaborative effort consisting of the input of Bowen, Stradley, and Dark Horse Publisher Mike Richardson. "It's pretty much a committee decision, with Mike getting the final word on what's to be produced," Bowen said.

When asked about the future of the hobby, Bowen said, "The future as I see it involves the price of the kits coming down, with the quality of the kits going up. The market is still very young but is growing at an alarming rate. Proof of that is the explosion of publications devoted entirely to model production and building: publications like Model and Toy Collector, Kit Builders and Glue Sniffers, Fantastic Images, and many more." When asked whom he wants to reach with these kits, Bowen said, "Everyone and their dog."

Now, that's dedication to a hobby.

Kitchen Sink Press will offer a number of products based on The Crow in August. Included in the list are a door poster, a movie poster, postcards, an uncut sheet of trading cards, two stickers, a set of temporary tattoos, a leather jacket, a denim jacket, a bandanna, the fourth in a series of T-shirts, a knit cap, a keychain, a cloisonne pin, a silver ring, and a leather cord for the ring.

Gilbert Roland dies

Gilbert Roland, whose movie career survived the transition from silent pictures to sound, died May 15 in his Beverly Hills, Calif., home. He was 88.

His roles had included the silent classic Camille with Norma Talmadge in 1927 and such sound movies as The Sea Hawk with Errol Flynn in 1940.

He was the son of a bullfighter, born Luis Armando Damaso de Alonso in Juarez, Mexico, and began training to become a bullfighter himself. But acting lured him away, and he became a movie performer, instead. In silent films, he often played a Latin lover but branched out, when sound arrived on the screen. He made the transformation from leading actor to character smoothly.

His other film credits include Juarez in 1939, Captain Kidd in 1945, and many Westerns.

Survivors include his wife, Guillermina.

TONY'S TIPS

press comics." Because I said so. If you challenge my authority here, I'll have to send for my "headsman of small-press comics." You don't want me to do that. Trust me.

Bliss has been busier than ever, producing a bunch of Sparky the Dog minis ($1 each) and, as a change of pace, Indiana Chicken Coupe #1 (50¢). The latter details Bliss' and her husband Nick's purchase of their new truck. It's a clever bit of work. A stamp sent to Bliss at: Paradise Valley Comics, Box 304, Valparaiso, Ind. 46384, brings you her latest catalog.

Rick Santman is the "weird uncle of small-press comics," not unlike the Uncle Harold character who stars in his No Discernible Talent Adventures (50¢). Santman's efforts aren't exactly on the cutting edge of satire — one issue is devoted to Beers, a parody of Joyce Kilmer's Trees — but they're good for a chuckle or six. Santman will sell or trade his work. Write him at: 12065 Elmdale Dr., Manchester, Mich. 48158.

Finally, I would be remiss not to mention Andrew Ford's Rib. It's an ambitious tale of prejudice in a society made up of human beings and humanoid worms. Ford doesn't draw well, and I'm being kind, but his story just captures your attention. He's published eight issues to date, each costing 50¢ and a stamp. The address: AmF Comics, P.O. Box 168, Falconer, N.Y. 14733.

Back to the convention itself.

I don't want to take away any credit from the hard work that made the Chicago Comicon such a successful event, but I think the promoters, along with the thousands of fans and pros who attended this con, benefited from what I hope is a temporary downsizing of the comic-book market.

Largely absent from this year's festivities were the boorish speculeeches waving foil-enhanced covers in our faces. There was a reawakening sense of dignity, of fun, of wonder, throughout this convention. It was darn near inspirational.

My thanks to the organizers of the 15th Chicago Comicon. It was well and truly a blast!

Tony Isabella, aging party beast, will attend the San Diego Comic-Con Aug. 4-7. Come over to the CBG booth when he's there and say, "Hi, Tony!" He'll be the cute one.

You can also write to Tony at Tony's Tips*, P.O. Box 1502, Medina, Ohio 44258. Such a face!*

CORRECTION:

The Horizon Hobbies & Toys ad which appeared on page 83 of the July 29, 1994 issue of Comics Buyer's Guide stated that the Key Chains illustrated in the ad appear as actual size. This is not the case. The illustrations are actually 35% larger than the actual key chains.

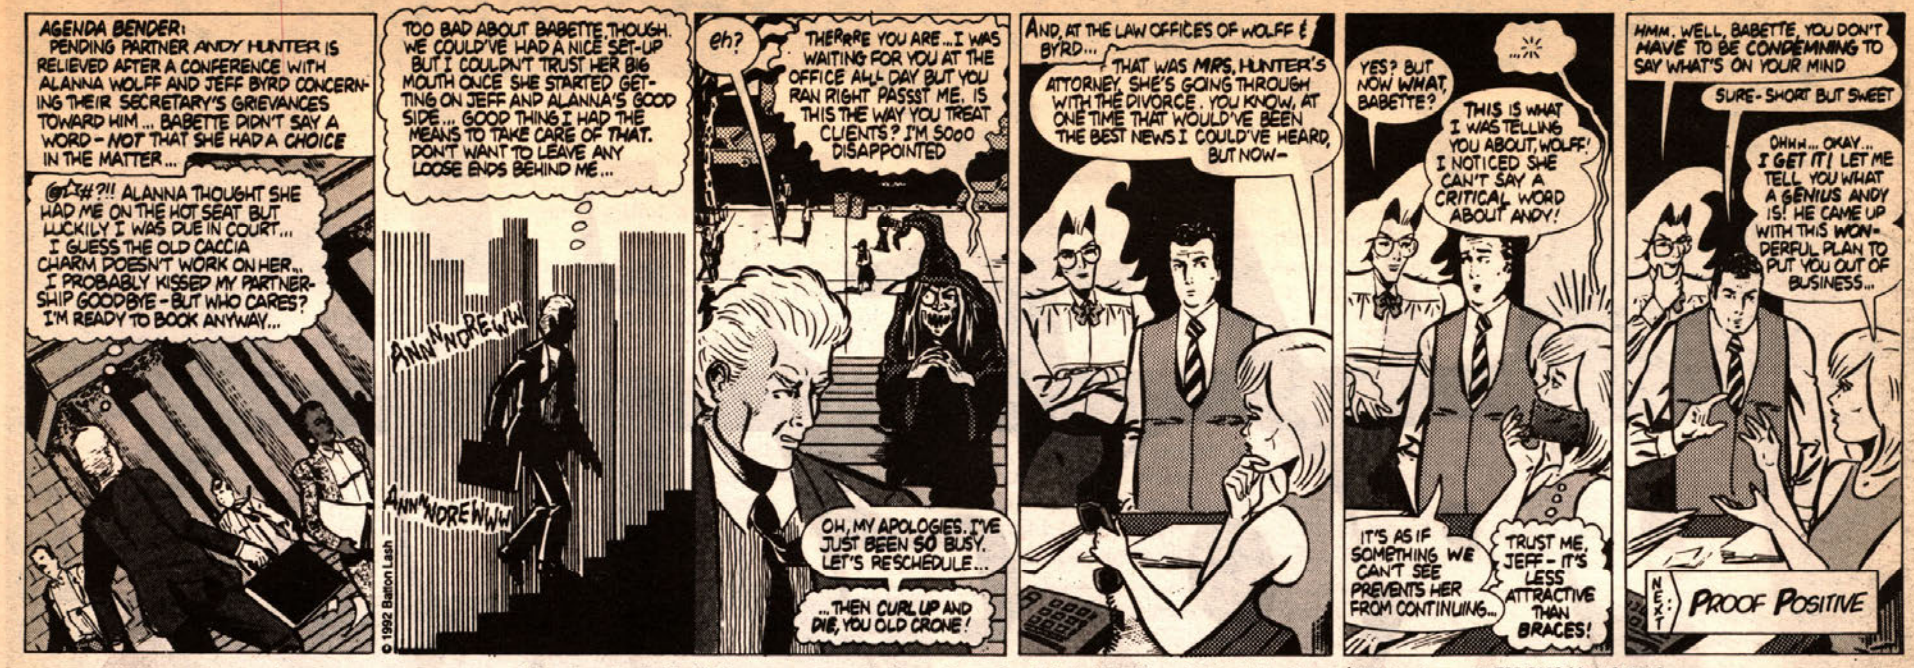
Wolff & Byrd. Counselors of the Macabre ..... By Batton Lash



AGENDA BENDER:
PENDING PARTNER ANDY HUNTER IS RELIEVED AFTER A CONFERENCE WITH ALANNA WOLFF AND JEFF BYRD CONCERNING THEIR SECRETARY'S GRIEVANCES TOWARD HIM... BABETTE DIDN'T SAY A WORD - NOT THAT SHE HAD A CHOICE IN THE MATTER...
@!%#?!! ALANNA THOUGHT SHE HAD ME ON THE HOT SEAT BUT LUCKILY I WAS DUE IN COURT... I GUESS THE OLD CACCIA CHARM DOESN'T WORK ON HER... I PROBABLY KISSED MY PARTNERSHIP GOODBYE - BUT WHO CARES? I'M READY TO BOOK ANYWAY...
TOO BAD ABOUT BABETTE THOUGH. WE COULD'VE HAD A NICE SET-UP BUT I COULDN'T TRUST HER BIG MOUTH ONCE SHE STARTED GETTING ON JEFF AND ALANNA'S GOOD SIDE... GOOD THING I HAD THE MEANS TO TAKE CARE OF THAT. DON'T WANT TO LEAVE ANY LOOSE ENDS BEHIND ME...

THERE'RE YOU ARE... I WAS WAITING FOR YOU AT THE OFFICE ALL DAY BUT YOU RAN RIGHT PASSST ME. IS THIS THE WAY YOU TREAT CLIENTS? I'M SOOO DISAPPOINTED
OH, MY APOLOGIES. I'VE JUST BEEN SO BUSY. LET'S RESCHEDULE...
...THEN CURL UP AND DIE, YOU OLD CRONE!
AND, AT THE LAW OFFICES OF WOLFF & BYRD...
THAT WAS MRS. HUNTER'S ATTORNEY. SHE'S GOING THROUGH WITH THE DIVORCE. YOU KNOW, AT ONE TIME THAT WOULD'VE BEEN THE BEST NEWS I COULD'VE HEARD, BUT NOW-
YES? BUT NOW WHAT, BABETTE?
THIS IS WHAT I WAS TELLING YOU ABOUT, WOLFF! I NOTICED SHE CAN'T SAY A CRITICAL WORD ABOUT ANDY!
IT'S AS IF SOMETHING WE CAN'T SEE PREVENTS HER FROM CONTINUING...
TRUST ME, JEFF - IT'S LESS ATTRACTIVE THAN BRACES!
HMM. WELL, BABETTE, YOU DON'T HAVE TO BE CONDEMNING TO SAY WHAT'S ON YOUR MIND
SURE - SHORT BUT SWEET
OHHH... OKAY... I GET IT! LET ME TELL YOU WHAT A GENIUS ANDY IS! HE CAME UP WITH THIS WONDERFUL PLAN TO PUT YOU OUT OF BUSINESS...

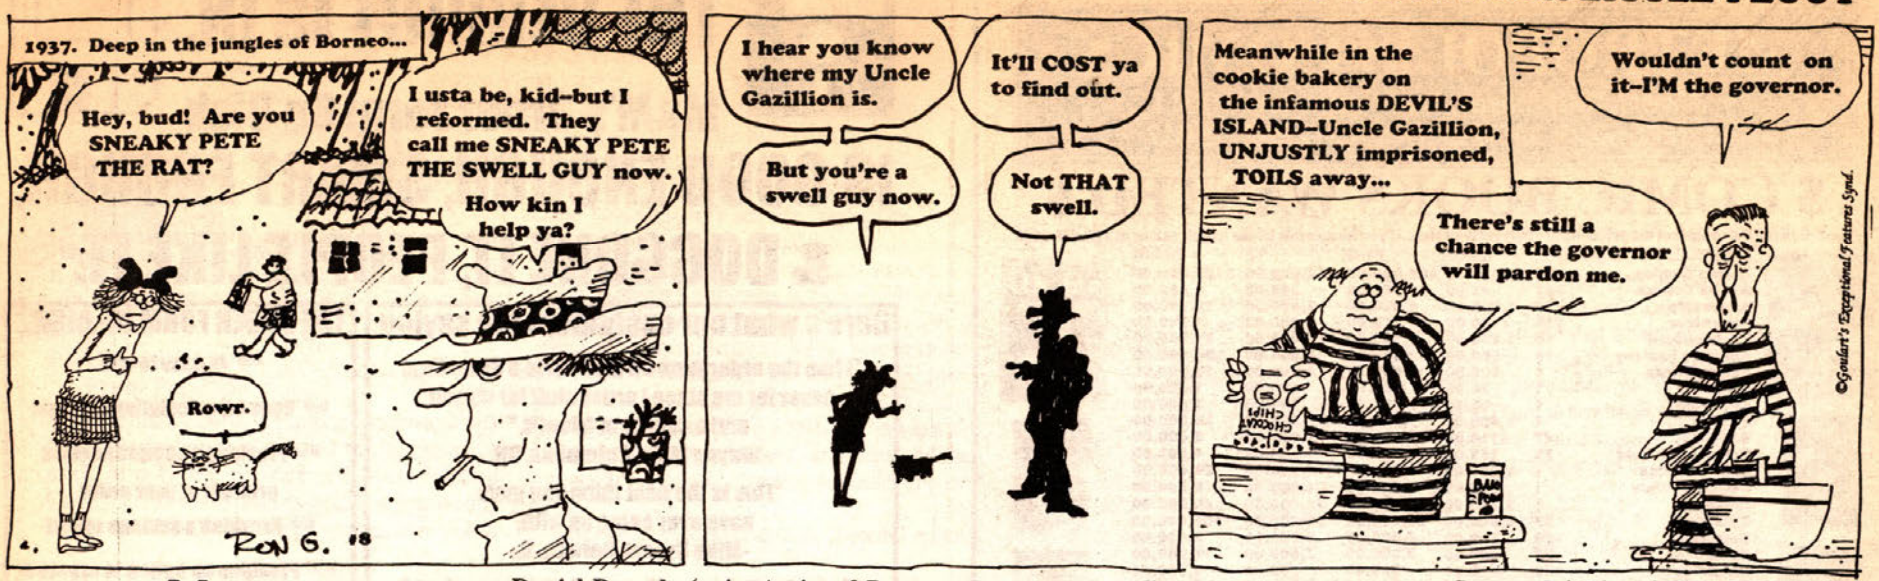
Ron Goulart's GOLDEN AGE FUNNIES

This Week: POOR LITTLE PEGGY



1937. Deep in the jungles of Borneo...
Hey, bud! Are you SNEAKY PETE THE RAT?
I usta be, kid–but I reformed. They call me SNEAKY PETE THE SWELL GUY now.
How kin I help ya?
Rowr.
RON G. '88
I hear you know where my Uncle Gazillion is.
It'll COST ya to find out.
But you're a swell guy now.
Not THAT swell.
Meanwhile in the cookie bakery on the infamous DEVIL'S ISLAND–Uncle Gazillion, UNJUSTLY imprisoned, TOILS away...
Wouldn't count on it–I'M the governor.
There's still a chance the governor will pardon me.

Now Appearing

[Editor's Note: Items for this feature, which lists appearances in comics stores and lecture halls – not conventions – of writers, artists, and editors and should be submitted as far in advance as possible. They must be written (preferably typewritten and definitely not all in capital letters) – I cannot take these by telephone – and kept brief, preferably in the format used here.

There is no charge, so give me a break and actually write it out instead of sending an ad flier that mentions a signing along with dozens of other things. And please give the store address; don't tell me where I can look it up.

Send to Maggie Thompson, 700 E. State St., Iola, Wis. 54990 or fax it – to Maggie Thompson (my name must be on the fax for it to reach me) at (715) 445-4087.

Messages sent to me through other departments will be ignored.

Send items as early as possible – when a fax is sent May 19 about a signing May 26 – no, I am not making this up; I did get such a fax – it benefits no one. I must receive the item more than a week before the signing in order to have a sporting chance of getting it in.

The deadlines are inflexible – that's the only way to maintain a weekly schedule.

Special note: If your written or typewritten listing is barely legible, it will be totally illegible after it is faxed.

BUY COMICS TRADER ADS

AND GET THE MOST SPACE FOR YOUR ADVERTISING DOLLAR!

Remember, the better looking and easier to read your Comics Trader ad is, the more business you will do. Here are some tips on making your ad the most effective.

- Do not use small letters. Each 8½" X 8½" sheet is reduced down to fit a single Comics Trader Box. If you use small letters before reduction, the copy may be illegible after.
- Do not FAX your Comics Trader ads. The ad copy becomes distorted and appears blotchy when printed.
- Use clean white paper, clean typewriter keys and a dark ribbon.
- Include ordering information, postage rates, name, address and telephone numbers. This leaves no questions unanswered and avoids delay.
- NEW ADVERTISERS: Must supply CBG with your current street address and phone number to avoid delay. If you choose not to list your phone number in your ad, you must provide CBG with your current phone number.

Gen-Con Super-Hero Sunday guests

The guest list for Gen-Con's Super-Hero Sunday, scheduled for Aug. 21 at MECCA in Milwaukee, includes:

✸ Guest of Honor Peter David. In the past few years, David has written two dozen novels, hundreds of comic books, and two movie screenplays. His comic-book work includes: DC's Atlantis Chronicles and Aquaman, Disney's The Little Mermaid, Marvel's The Incredible Hulk, Spider-Man 2099, and several other Spider-Man titles, and Epic's Sachs & Violens. But I Digress is David's weekly opinion column in Comics Buyer's Guide and covers many topics inside and outside the field of comics. David's novels include Knight Life, Howling Mad, and novelizations of The Return of Swamp Thing and The Rocketeer. His Star Trek: The Next Generation novels, including Vendetta, Q-in-Law, and Imzadi, have put him on the New York Times Bestsellers' List. His latest Star Trek: The Next Generation novel, Q Squared, was released earlier this summer.

✸ Richard Ashford is a Marvel editor who edits Marvel Comics Presents and Conan the Adventurer. He has also written stories for Excalibur and other Marvel titles.

✸ Tim Bradstreet has published work in the gaming arena with Polyhedron, Dragon, and White Wolf Publications. In comics, he has worked on DC's Batman: Legends of the Dark Knight and Dark Horse's Comics' Greatest World, Aliens: Music of the Spheres, and Will to Power.

✸ Jeff Butler is known among gamers and comics fans for his work on the Marvel Super-Heroes roleplaying game and other fantasy art. With writer Mike Baron, Butler co-created The Badger, a series which is now with Dark Horse. In addition, Butler worked on The Green Hornet at Now.

✸ Peter Coogan is a doctoral student in American Studies at Michigan State University, home of one of the largest public comics collection in the United States. Co-editor of the Comic Art Collection's newsletter, Comic Art Studies, his dissertation topic is "The Ante-Diluvian Age: The Development of the Super-Hero from Daniel Boone to Batman."

✸ Most of Kaja Foglio's work in the gaming press has been for Wizards of the Coast, for whom she has produced art for various Magic: The Gathering expansion sets as well as cards for the new Deckmaster game Jyhad.

✸ Phil Foglio's comics career is wide and varied: Warp Graphics' MythAdventures; Comico's Starblazers; First's Dynamo Joe; and DC's Angel and the Ape, Plastic Man, and Stanley and his Monster. He also has his own company, Palliard Press, which publishes Buck Godot: Zap-gun for Hire. Foglio is best known by gamers as the creator of What's New? with Phil and Dixie, a comic-strip back-up feature from Dragon that has been collected into two books by Palliard Press.

✸ Ken Gale is the New York-based publisher of Evolution Comics and editor of Dangerous Times (a dual-feature book of Celtic fantasy and science fiction starring Viderix the Druid and Belegean Days) and New Frontiers (Actionmaster and Green Ghost and Lotus, two separate super-hero strips). He also writes The Good Guys for Defiant. He is also on the Celtic Calendar Committee and is the host of New York's only radio talk show on comics, 'Nuff Said.

✸ Tony Harris' work on Dark Horse's The Mummy for its Universal Monsters series led him to DC, where he painted a number of cards for the SkyBox DC Master series. Now, he is the artist on Starman, one of the titles spinning off from events in Zero Hour.

✸ Mark Heike is a lifelong comics reader who became active in fandom as an artist in the mid-'70s and soon became a professional artist at Charlton in 1980. He has been the artist on AC Comics' Femforce, Ms. Victory, Nightveil, and Nyoka the Jungle Girl. Heike has also worked as a freelance artist on First's Nexus, Now's Green Hornet, various fill-in stories for Marvel, and freelance art for TSR on such games as Buck Rogers: High Adventure and Marvel Super-Heroes.

✸ Bob Hickey is the creative director and co-publisher of Sky Comics and the executive producer for Arena. He is the creator, plotter, and inker of Blood & Roses, Tempered Steele, and Race Danger. Hickey is also working on an upcoming series with writers Tom and Mary Bierbaum called Stormquest.

✸ Rafael Kayanan is a Marvel artist. He began his career working on Savage Sword of Conan and is working on Conan the Adventurer.

✸ Joe Martin is the editor of Arena and the editor-in-chief of Sky Comics. He is the creator and writer of Seeker, has written for Blood & Roses, and is the writer of the upcoming Tempered Steele mini-series.

✸ Terry Pavlet has worked in both the gaming and comics fields for a number of years. His game art has appeared in numerous game products and magazines, including Dragon, Dungeon Adventures, Polyhedron, and White Wolf. His comics credits include a wide range of work: Caliber's Lizards and Summer Fun Special; Comic Zone's Legends & Folklore, Screen Monsters, War Criminals, and XTV; Innovation's Cyberpunk, Lost in Space, and Vampire Lestat; Malibu's Alien Nation: Newcomers, and Defenseless Dead; and Millennium's Doc Savage and Weird Tales. His other work includes art for licensed shirts, ties, and boxer shorts featuring designs from Hanna Barbera, Star Trek, Lucasfilm, and Harley Davidson.

✸ Julie Ratliff is on the faculty of the English Department at Ball State University. She has published a number of works on comics and comics-related matter. Her most recent presentation at the National Popular Culture Association conference was titled "In Defense of the Super-Hero: A Commentary on the Emerging Canon."

✸ Mark Rogers is a doctoral student in American Culture at the University of Michigan. He has presented a work on Animal Man to the National Popular Culture Association and is planning a dissertation on the ethnography of comics fans and the comics industry.

✸ Marty Stever, vice-president of marketing at Valiant, is responsible for Valiant's marketing efforts and public relations. In addition to his work in the comics field, Stever had an earlier career in the gaming industry; he, along with Troy Denning and Mark Acres, designed the Elfquest Board Game for Mayfair Games.

✸ Steven Sullivan is a well-known artist to readers of Dragon, with his monthly fantasy comic strip The Twilight Empires. Sullivan has worked in the gaming industry at both Pacesetter Games and TSR Inc. and has also worked on many different projects within the comic book industry, including Archie's Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles Adventures and Now's The New Adventures of Speed Racer.

✸ Maggie Thompson has been an editor for Comics Buyer's Guide for more than a decade, and she and her husband, Don, made CBG a mainstay in the comic-book trade with its reporting on the industry. She also found time to write a Dark Shadows mini-series for Innovation, which published it in 1993. With all this work and ever-present deadlines, Thompson continues to expand her workload into such other projects as CBG's comics price guides, the collection and editing of Comic-Book Superstars (a collection of information on comic-book professionals), and the formation of the Comic Book Professionals Association.

✸ Mercy Van Vlack is the artist for Evolution Comics' Green Ghost and Lotus and handles numerous editorial and publishing chores for Evolution Comics. She is the primary artist for the 1995 Celtic Calendar and accepts numerous commissions for personal drawings and sketches of RPG characters.

✸ Peter Venters is a freelance artist from England with published work in both the gaming and comics fields. He has produced black-and-white artwork for White Wolf and color paintings for Wizards of the Coast's Magic: The Gathering card game supplements. In the UK, his comics work includes Sweet Meats and Judge Dredd.

News Briefs

By Rob Allstetter

✸ X-Men is coming to prime time.

The Fox Network announced July 7 that two new episodes of the Saturday-morning series would be broadcast Friday, July 29, and Friday, Aug. 5, from 8:30-9 p.m. ET. Fox officials would not say what the content of the two episodes would be, but CBG has learned that they will likely be a two-parter involving Wolverine and The Reavers.

This is not the first time Fox has broadcast super-hero cartoons in prime time. In early 1992, Fox aired 13 episodes of Batman: The Animated Series on Sunday nights.

✸ Who will be Batman's new love interest in Batman Forever, the third live-action movie in the series? It apparently won't be Rene Russo, as filmmakers look for someone closer to new Batman Val Kilmer's age. Leading candidates include Sandra Bullock, who starred in this summer's Speed, and Nicole Kidman, as well as models Elle MacPherson and Cindy Crawford. Crawford appeared on Entertainment Tonight July 7, saying she had met with Batman Forever director Joel Schumacher about the part of Chase Meridian. The movie is scheduled to begin production Sept. 21.

✸ Production of the live-action Tank Girl movie began June 21 in White Sands, N.M. The film, from United Artists, stars Lori Petty in the title role; Malcolm McDowell as Kesslee; Naomi Watts as Jet Girl; Ice-T, Jeff Kober, Reg E. Cathey, and Scott Coffey as The Rippers; Iggy Pop as Rat Face; Don Harvey as Sergeant Small; and Brian Wimmer as Richard.

The movie is directed by Rachel Talalay and produced by Richard Lewis, Pen Densham, and John Watson. The screenplay was adapted by Tedi Sarafian from the comic book by Jamie Hewlett and Alan Martin.

✸ DC Comics has announced plans for a Nightwing limited series for next summer, written by Dennis O'Neil and drawn by Mike Wieringo.

✸ Dark Horse begins a regular Ghost series in April.

Mike Bannon

This illustration reflects my feelings on Don's passing. I've tried (and failed) to put these feelings into words, so I hope this drawing will at least vaguely speak louder than my (Harpo Marx-like) words. I purchased All in Color for a Dime when I was about 10, and, though the book is now tattered and held together by ancient Scotch tape (not unlike myself), I wouldn't give it up for anything in the world.

As an adult I can see All in Color as a witty collection of essays — but, as a kid, reading the book opened a doorway to a past world of comics that I was yearning to learn more about. It also made me feel like I was not alone in my love of comics — here were adults who were taking them seriously. I've always been grateful to Dick and Don (and the rest of the book's authors) for that.

Seajay Publishing opens its doors

Seajay Ventures announced the formation of its publishing division, Seajay Publishing. Over the next 18 months, Seajay Publishing plans to release eight titles including Mister Chameleon Mystery Magazine, The Official Captain Sentinel: Special Edition, Tales of the Demi-Gods, Whispering Shadows, and Overseas Graphik. Also scheduled for release are posters by Bill Holloway, Seppo Makinen, Charles Dougherty, and Steve Addlesee.

Seajay Publishing's editorial staff consists of Publisher and Editor-in-Chief Jonathan A. Gilbert, Creative Director Dave A. Law, International Editor Charles Dougherty, Editorial Consultant Elizabeth Gamble, and Editor Steve Seager. Among the artists, writers, and letterers who are scheduled to contribute to Seajay Publishing's titles are Chris Sturhann, Charles Dougherty, R. Humble, Dave A. Law, Dan Duncan, Seppo Makinen, Bill Holloway, Lon Roberts, Susan Dorne, and Jonathan Gilbert.

As well as the above-mentioned titles, Seajay Publishing has a number of other projects at various stages of development. These include The Aquanauts, Warriors of the Lion, Lornetta of the Bloodsword, and She Is . . . Silkie. Seajay Publishing is also negotiating for the publishing rights of a number of concepts from Europe and North America.

While Seajay Publishing has a full publishing schedule in the works, the company said it is interested in seeing new material. Submissions should be sent to Jonathan A. Gilbert, Seajay Ventures, 271 Southcrest Dr., London, Ontario, N6J 1N3 Canada. All submissions must include an SASE and international reply coupon (make sure the envelope is large enough, if you want your submission returned). Seajay's immediate need is for action, adventure, horror, and mystery series (with each installment being eight to 14 pages in length), but the company will consider any material that is sent.

Seajay Publishing said it supports the comics creators' Bill of Rights and believes that the more freedom and control over the property a creator has, the better the product will be.

My name is Spider-Man, and I'm your waiter. Will you have coffee, tea, or milk?

From super-heroes to just plain hero sandwiches.

That's the plan of Marvel Entertainment Group Inc., which on May 26 signed a letter of intent to develop a chain of eating places with the owners of Planet Hollywood restaurants.

Details aren't final yet, and only the letter of intent has been signed. But plans are to open as many as 30 restaurants.

The restaurants are to feature costumed actors and props from Marvel Comics.

COMICS TRADER:

This is an area reserved for the advertiser who wants no-frills advertising with a price to match. $35.00 buys one of the 12 equal spaces on a Comics Trader page. These spaces can be bought in any multiple of the $35.00 unit (maximum 6 units per page). We'll reduce the ad and handle all the production - just design your ad on an 8½ x 8½ space and sent it with payment. Remember to keep your design simple so your ad will be readable when reduced.

Super Traders should be typed on an 8½" x 11" sheet of paper which will be reduced to fit a ¼ page space. Each Super Trader costs $99.00 - limit 2 Super Traders per page.

COLLECTOR'S SHOWCASE:

This cost-efficient format in COMIC BUYER'S GUIDE offers you typeset space at a discount. Collector's Showcase units are approximately business card size. You may buy as many units as you want for an ad at cost of $23.00 per box. All typesetting, photos, art, borders and logos are done by Krause Publicatons and are included in the price.

CLASSIFIED DISPLAY:

One column ads, 1-3 inches in length, must appear in the classified section. They may be placed under the various classified headings. This gives you the advantage of targeting the collectors you want to reach while standing out among the smaller word ads in classified. Rates and sizes are as follows:

(Cost per ad; ads must run consecutively):

AD SIZE	1 ISSUE	6 ISSUES	13 ISSUES	26 ISSUES	52 ISSUES
1. 1 col.x1" (2¼"x1")	$17.00	$16.50	$15.75	$14.75	$14.00

Krause Publications, Inc. reserves the right to decline advertising or suspend advertising privileges for such periods of time as in its discretion it sees fit, for any reason, whatsoever, irrespective of the validity of the reasons for such declination or suspension. The forwarding of an order is construed as an acceptance of all rates and conditions under which advertising is at the time sold. The publisher will not be bound by any conditions, printed or otherwise, appearing on any order for advertising space, billing instructions or copy instructions, which conflict with its policies. Advertisers and advertising agencies assume liability for all content (including text representation and illustrations) of advertisements printed, and also assumes responsibility for any claims arising therefrom made against the publisher. The problem with being a fiction writer is that it's so damned difficult to keep up with the real world.

The way in which the events in the news develop have a staggeringly high factor of "Huh?" So much so that one wonders if one can ever top reality with mere fantasy.

What's it like out there?

1. I presume you've all heard the joke:

"Knock, knock."

"Who's there?"

"O.J."

"O.J. who?"

"Congratulations; you're on the jury."

(Me, I'm still waiting for a cartoon labelled "The Simpsons" that features Bart saying to O.J., "Y'know, when you ran away, it made you look even more guilty," and O.J. saying in chagrin, "D'oh!")

There I was, ready to watch Batman: The Animated Series, and instead the local station booted it in order to air whatever was going on that day with the Simpson trial. Given the choice of presenting young viewers with the adventures of a man who dresses like a bat from hell and fights crime or the adventures of a man who runs like a bat from hell and is accused of crimes, the latter was considered more worthy of the time slot. It's certainly the more surreal.

The newscaster intoned, "The O.J. Trial, Day Three," and suddenly I was having flashbacks to the hostages in Iran, where broadcasters would say, "America Held Hostage, Day 276." Settle yourselves in for a new siege, folks. We're going to be held hostage to the O.J. trial for quite some time. In a perverse way, there's a very selfish reason to hope he's found innocent . . . because if a guilty verdict comes back, then it's years of appeals. And if, God help us, a superior court reverses the judge's decision on the admissibility of the evidence found in Simpson's house, we could be looking at another trial.

It's truth-stranger-than-fiction. Imagine: You're watching a television program starring O.J. Simpson playing the hero. His ex-wife is murdered. The cops converge on his house and find blood-smeared evidence. They look at each other and say significantly, "Looks like we got our man."

Your immediate reaction as a viewer would be, "How stupid! How ridiculous! If he killed his wife, he wouldn't then be dumb enough or sloppy enough to leave traces around his house! Obviously, it's a frame!"

And if you watched that slow-speed car chase, you'd be laughing. Car chases aren't like that. We all know that. They go real fast, and the cops block you off, and that's that. But they didn't do that this time. Why? Because he held everyone else off by pointing a gun at his head and threatening to kill himself.

How could you do that in a TV movie? Most viewers will easily remember Cleavon Little in Blazing Saddles shouting, "Nobody moves or the nigger gets it," with his six shooter against his forehead. The audience would yell at the screen, "You guys are ripping off Mel Brooks!"

(Can you just imagine if Rodney King, lo, those many months ago, had endeavored to keep the LA cops at bay by pulling the same tactic? How successful would that strategy have been, I wonder. Actually, I don't wonder at all and I'm sure you don't, either.)

Of course, there will be movies about it, now that it's already happened. And people will accept it, because it all occurred right in front of their disbelieving eyes. But if the story hadn't happened in what we laughingly refer to as "reality," then the plot would be ripped to shreds by every critic in the land, because it's absurd and over-the-top and just flat-out ridiculous.

2. I now am able to understand first-hand what it's like for black people who are being informed that they must henceforth be called "African Americans." Why? Because I've only recently been informed that the term "Jew" has fallen into disfavor.

Any longtime readers will know that I sometimes refer to myself as "Your humble Jew." Yet now I find that I'm politically incorrect, not about someone else's ethnicity (as I've been in the past) but about my very own.

When I inquired as to what the now-acceptable term was (somehow intuiting that "Jewboy," "Hebe," "Kike," and "Christ-Killer" hadn't made the cut), I learned that either "Jewish person" or "person of the Jewish persuasion" was preferable to the succinct, accurate "Jew."

"Jewish persuasion." Now there's a laugh. "Hi. We want to persuade you to be Jewish. It's great. First you get to have some skin whacked off the Chairman of your Membership. After that, you get to eat off separate dishes, not get to drive anywhere on Friday night, and, oh, yes, cultures all over the world have a centuries-old history of trying to exterminate you." It's part of Jewish tradition that we don't proselytize ("Jews for Jesus" aside). Why should we? Who'd want to drag someone into as persecuted a group as us?

And now the persecution extends to the essence of what we call ourselves. Jews. Can't be a Jew. Too many negative connotations, one imagines. Well, yeah, I guess entire nations shouting "Kill the Jews!" would tend to diminish the luster just a tad. But the protectors of public sensitivity will have to excuse me if I tell them to take a flying falafel.

By the way, along these lines, I highly recommend Politically Correct Bedtime Stories by James Finn Garner. A slim volume, published by MacMillan for $8.95, it's worth it, nevertheless. Typical of the book are moments such as the Big Bad Wolf encountering Little Red Riding Hood:

The wolf said, "You know, my dear, it isn't safe for a little girl to walk through these woods alone."

Red Riding Hood said, "I find your sexist remark offensive in the extreme, but I will ignore it because of your traditional status as an outcast from society, the stress of which has caused you to develop your own, entirely valid world-view."

3. Rob Liefeld's letter in CBG #1080. Presuming that he was serious, and unaware of the incredulous guffaws his missive would prompt, I can only find myself tributing Doctor Frasier Crane and ask: "What color is the sky in your world?"

4. When one sees Cyrano de Bergerac, it seems almost quaint that the big-nosed swordsman would be so convinced that his homeliness would forever render him repellant to Roxanne. (Although one must observe that, just as Cyrano was blinded to his inner attractiveness by dint of his exterior ugliness, so was he, likewise, blinded by Roxanne's beauty to the fact that she was and is one of the most feeble-minded, shallow, empty-headed ditzes in all literature. What, he wondered, could Roxanne see in him? I say, what in hell did he see in her?)

The reason it's quaint is that, in our society, bizarre matches occur all the time: couplings that make you say, "Huh?" because, on the surface, the two don't seem to go together. We tend to categorize or ghettoize relationships (as we do with all things), and sometimes there's a pairing that prompts doubletakes.

Lucille Ball and Desi Arnaz, for example, were considered such a bizarre duo that CBS was resistant to a series starring them, since there was concern that the viewing public would never believe that those two could be married.

Then there's Mel Brooks and Anne Bancroft. Or Stiller and Meara, who plumbed the comic possibilities of the short Jew (oh, no!) and the tall Irish Catholic as a couple.

Or how about Billy Joel and Christie Brinkley? (And I'm sorry, this will sound chauvinist or something. I mean, I don't know him or her; I don't know what he's like or she's like.

Maybe he's a creep, maybe she's a shrew. If Cyrano (or O.J., for that matter) taught us anything, it's that you shouldn't judge by the surface. Nevertheless, to me the only thing stranger than the two of them getting married is the two of them getting divorced. All I can think of is, "Billy, for crying out loud, you're married to Christie Brinkley and you're letting her go? What're you, nuts? You're giving her up voluntarily? Then again, maybe that was O.J.'s mindset, and look where that led.)

Or Julia Roberts and Lyle Lovett. That certainly caused a lot of raised eyebrows and, frankly, a lot of long, hard looks at Lovett, as men everywhere said, "What's he got? And how can I get some?"

Or Bill Clinton and — well — everyone, it seems sometimes.

But nothing — no pairing, no marriage, no June wedding or reported midnight assignation, not Catherine the Great and her horses, not all the peculiar pairings in the world — could have quite prepared us for the rumored marriage of Michael Jackson and Lisa Marie Presley.

As of this writing, this report has been floating around for about a week now. No spokesperson in any camp has denied it. Jackson and Presley are reportedly holed up in the Trump Tower.

Now, I'm sorry. As noted above, there's lots of offbeat couples in the world. But this one is off in its own reality. It should be no trouble finding out which room they're staying in. Just look for the one where Rod Serling is standing outside the door.

I dunno. I mean, I guess I should wish them well and everything. (Maybe send them a crock pot. Never more appropriate.) And, in a way, we should all be grateful. This will, at the very least, put an end to the rumors that Elvis might still be alive. Because if he was, then I'm willing to bet that this would finish him off.

Of course, in the event that they have a child, I'll wager that instead of having a birth certificate ready, there'll be a recording contract from Sony instead. Furthermore, toilet training will be quite a chore, what with all that genetic predisposition towards crotch grabbing and hip swivelling that will make it difficult to know when the child actually has to go potty.

As I've said, hard times for a fiction writer. You can't make this stuff up.

(Peter David, writer of stuff, can be written to at: To Be Continued, Inc., P.O. Box 239, Bayport, N.Y. 11705, and takes this last-minute opportunity to announce that a screening of the SF Western Oblivion is scheduled during the San Diego Comic-Con on Thursday, Aug. 4, at 7:30 p.m. at the UA Glass House Theater (so no stone throwing), which I'm told is five minutes from the convention center. Director Sam Irvin and I will introduce the film and answer questions — such as why the hell isn't it in the theaters yet? All are invited.)

The Carl Barks Library of Walt Disney's Comics and Stories in Color

Volume #33 contains another five complete Carl Barks Donald Duck 10-page stories. First is "Donald's Pet Service," in which Donald cooks up his latest business venture only to foist it—and the calamities that come with it—on Huey, Dewey and Louie! Next is "The Dye is Cast," where Gyro Gearloose demonstrates a most "colorful" invention that blackens Duckburg's opinion of Donald, followed by "Kakimaw Country," featuring one of Donald's more outlandish schemes to finagle a favor out of his ever-stingy Uncle Scrooge. "Special Delivery" finds the kids on the job as delivery boys, while "Losing Face" wraps the volume with a tale about good intentions gone awry—Donald Duck style!

This is the latest release in a series of fifty-one high-quality albums reprinting the Donald Duck stories of Carl Barks from Walt Disney's Comics and Stories. Each album includes a matching Carl Barks' Heroes and Villains Trading Card, not available elsewhere!

All albums published so far in the Carl Barks Library in Color are kept in print and are easily reordered by your favorite comics retailer!

"The New Laird of Castle McDuck"
by Don Rosa

Scrooge answers the call of his clan when the dastardly Whiskervilles try to use the law to take possession of the ancestral McDuck estate! The rightful owners stand bravely—and Scrooge's baby sister Hortense demonstrates why the "hound" may not have proven effective in this instance—but it's up to the someday-world's-richest-man to save the estate, the honor of the Clan McDuck, and his very life!
This story is complete in Uncle Scrooge #289, though it also stands as Chapter Five of Don Rosa's immensely popular twelve-part epic "The Life and Times of Scrooge McDuck." The issue is rounded out by the Tony Strobl/Steve Steere drawn "I.O.U. . . . But Who?"
